Nairobi, Apr. 30.

A party of thirty-one Italian natives who escaped from the camp here, were shot by the King's African Rifles.

Three were drowned trying to cross the river, sixteen were killed and six are still missing.

A sergeant in charge of the party was killed by a warning shot that he fired if they failed to command.

The order and the fugitives scattered, some to the river and others to the bush. — Reuter

The commercial pact is designed to facilitate and increase the mutual trade of the two countries and was signed by the German Foreign Ex-

CREDITS FOR

CHAMBERLAIN TOLD

London, Apr. 30.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer,

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, was asked in the House of Commons to-day

whether he was aware that several banks had granted German borrowers short term credits, and whether, in view of the fact that such credit transactions procured additional foreign exchange resources enabling the German Government to increase its raw material imports for rearmament, he would discourage granting of new credits to German borrowers.

He replied he was not aware of any such credits. He could, however, assure the House the question had been overlooked and was ever present in the minds of the appropriate authorities. He had no reason to believe the banking community as a whole was acting other than in accordance with the general feeling of the House. — British Wireless.

Pittsburgh, in another National League game, hit back at the Brubaker gave the Braves a helping hand with a drive over the fence.

Boston Braves, at home, beat the Cincinnati Reds, off colour in their last two starts, by scoring three runs on six hits. They held the Reds to one run on five hits.

St. Louis Cardinals humbled New

KEY POSITION EVACUATED

SUPPORT TROOPS FAIL TO ARRIVE

ITALIAN PLANES TAKE TOLL OF FUGITIVES

Addis Ababa, April 30.

Grave fears of treachery in the Ethiopian lines have been aroused by the capture of Mount Tarmadur on the northern front, near Debra Brehan, 70 miles from Addis Ababa. This was a key position, commanding two roads from Dessie to Addis Ababa.

It appears 1,000 reinforcements were sent to stem the Italian advance on the capital at this point, but they failed to arrive as they received no supplies.

In consequence, the garrison of the stronghold at Tarmadur, held by only 330 men under the Swedish Captain Tamm, was forced to retire in the face of the overwhelming odds against it. — Reuter Special.

Rome, Apr. 30.

Italian machine-guns, mounted on lorries, and a fleet of thirty bombing planes, each carrying a ton of explosives, are taking a heavy toll of Ethiopian troops fleeing up the Jijiga road following the capture of the so-called "Hindenburg Line" at Sasa Baneh by General Rodolfo Graziani's advancing army.

The planes, after dropping their bombs, return to their base at Gorrache for more, and continue their hunt-

Little opposition to the Italian advance is now foreseen until the invading columns reach a line about ten miles in front of Jijiga and Harar, and the Jijiga-Berbera road, 80 miles beyond Dugdabur.

It is believed that Ras Nasasibou, whose forces are engaging the Italians in this sector, has strongly fortified this line of defence. Loss of the positions will mean the cutting of the Ethiopian communications with Berbera, from which point they have been receiving supplies of munitions and other stores. — Reuter.

Emperor Optimistic

Paris, Apr. 30.

The mystery of the whereabouts of the Emperor of Ethiopia, missing since the defeat of his army on the northern front, allegedly as a result of repeated Italian gas attacks upon his unprotected soldiery, is now solved, according to a message received from Addis Ababa.

This message states that the Emperor has arrived at his capital.

He rode into the city this afternoon, and was in good spirits. The Negus declared the Italian advance was far from entailing a decisive Italian victory. — Reuter Bulletin Service.

They also include items for building up the reserves of strategic war minerals, and authorise the laying down of two new battleships if another power commences capital ship replacement. — Reuter.

When King Edward Went To The War

HIS FATHER'S ORDER TO BE TREATED LIKE OTHER OFFICERS

Accounts of King Edward's war experiences in France when he was Prince of Wales are contained in diaries and documents which have been presented by His Majesty to the Imperial War Museum.

King Edward went to France as aide-de-camp to Field Marshal Sir John French in November, 1914.

He remained there until March, 1916, when he was appointed Staff Captain at the headquarters of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force.

One of the documents gives a striking indication of King George's desire that his son should be treated as an ordinary officer.

It is a letter addressed to the Commanding Officer of the Grenadier Guards, and is dated Aug. 8, 1914, immediately after King Edward had received his commission in the battalion.

It reads: "I have the honour to convey to you His Majesty's commands which are as follows. That no honours or salutes to which the Prince of Wales is entitled as Prince of Wales should be rendered to him Royal Highness by the battalion in which he is serving, or by any brigade to which his battalion may belong.

The King's wish is that the Prince of Wales should be treated exactly as any other officers of the battalion.

The letter was signed by Lt.-Col. William Cavendish, Keeper of the Privy Purse.

IN WOODEN BOX

The diaries and documents are contained in a small wooden box fastened only with a brass hook and eye.

Among other interesting papers in the collection is a tiny crimson notebook which bears in gold lettering on the cover the words "Field Report Book." It is similar to that issued to officers during the war.

The entries are made in the King's neat, small handwriting in pencil. Although they were written over 20 years ago, most of the words are easily decipherable.

The first entry, which is dated June, 1914, apparently refers to the King's participation in Oxford University O.T.C. manoeuvres at Aldershot.

Before the next entry, war had been declared. Under the date, Aug. 14, 1914, are the words: "Left at 9.45 for St. Warley."

ARRIVAL IN FRANCE

Then on Page 4 is the revelation that the writer had arrived in France. The first entry after he had landed reads:

Nov. 18, 1914.—Cassel Metieren Mont Noir. Bailleur Gen. Rawlinson (4th corps).

Nicope lunch 1.0.0. Scots Greys at farm. Nicope bathing installation at brewery 9.21n howitzer and 6in gun.

Clearing hospital at Bailleur. Back here at 6.30 walking from Arques. Weather fine and bright, warm.

Other entries, undated, under the heading, "1st Army," read: 6.30: Gas started 5.50: Moving well but slowly, accurate but not heavy shelling 8 Div. in trenches.

6.45: Gas and smoke effective with 1st and corps French at Givenchy taken.

7.53: Air report states smoke extends 3 miles back.

8.0: Prisoner states only 7 corps and 6 Bav. R. Div. in reserve. Complete surprise (undecipherable) crossed front line but obscured by smoke advance slow as it hangs.

2nd Div. success at Givenchy. Meurt taken 120 prisoners. 24: Railhead Lillers.

25: Ferpay Noeux les Mines. Div. moved up into area vacated by 21st Div. with its head at Noeux and tail at Labastiere. Not in till 2.0.0. Replied at Eubrosse.

26: Div. moved up in afternoon to front lines. Artillery moved up to 1st Batt. area. Train moved to

H.M. the King inspecting Poilus (when he was Prince of Wales) on the Somme Battlefield, 1917.

Chocolates Made From Wood For Timber Kings

IF the dreams of the timber kings come true we shall all one day be:—

Living in wooden houses.
Wearing clothes made out of wood.
Eating chocolates prepared from wood.

Sending our children to wooden schools.
Riding about in cars, taxis and buses driven by wood-fuel.

Wood is the great raw material of the future, according to these experts, who have come here to talk wood and nothing but wood for the next few days.

'Wooden' Lounge Suit
There are a hundred of these men just now in town, and they are sitting daily in the council chamber of the London Chamber of Commerce. It is a room with wooden walls, so the wood kings feel at home.

Some of them use visiting cards made of wood.

One of the German delegates, Dr. J. A. von Monroy, drove his car from Berlin to London on wood-fuel for a price of ten marks—about sixteen shillings and eightpence. He covered the journey at an average speed of fifty miles an hour.

There are about 2,000 motor-cars running on wood-fuel in Germany to-day, and Dr. von Monroy says that the number is growing yearly.

At home Dr. von Monroy wears a lounge suit made entirely out of wood. He says it looks, feels and wears like a suit made from wool.

Nocux after refilling at Maillecoirt.

4th Corps 6.30.
Among others papers are secret documents relating to the ships of the Royal Navy before and during the war. They are enclosed in an envelope bearing the autograph of Mr. Winston Churchill, who was the First Lord of the Admiralty.

DRAWING OF SOLDIER
There is also an envelope with the words, "piece of envelope Airship L.15, which landed in the Thames April 1, 1916, having been damaged by gunfire." The fragment is enclosed.

The Museum has also 300 war maps used by the King when Prince of Wales. Some of these bear names of places written by him in script handwriting.

On one map there is a small drawing in pencil of a British infantryman wearing a tin helmet. It is believed to have been drawn by the present King.

There are also two beautifully bound volumes presented to the King when Prince of Wales, by the Italian Army headquarters. One contains some wonderful photographs of Italian war scenes. The other consists of magnificent relief maps of the war areas in which the Italian armies were engaged.

No decision has been reached as to whether these documents will be shown to the public when the Museum opens next July. If it is decided to exhibit them, they will probably be displayed in a glass case.

Cattle-Food
There are 22,000 different kinds of wood in the world, and some, declare the wood kings, are good to eat. Pigs and cattle are being fattened on wood-woods in some countries.

A German chemist is on his way to London with a few pounds of chocolates made out of wood. He is going to tempt the wood kings with his dainties.

Rome Calls Primate A "Pharisee"

Rome, Apr. 10.

Blister comment on the poison gas debate in the House of Lords appears in Rome morning newspapers to-day, but there is neither confirmation nor denial that such gas is being used by the Italians in Abyssinia.

The Messaggero refers to Viscount Cecil and the Archbishop of Canterbury as "Pharisees," and asks whether they have stopped to consider the mutilation of Italian soldiers by Abyssinians.

In this way they attempt to influence the public opinion of the world by invoking principles and sentiments consecrated to the respect of men for centuries.

The Popolo di Roma and the Messaggero both report instances of British bombardment and destruction of native villages and population.—British United Press.

"BACTERIOLOGICAL WAR"
The Popolo recalls an alleged order by Lord Amherst, British Commander-in-chief in North America in the 18th century. He is alleged to have given an order to quell rebellious tribes by spreading smallpox among them, thus wiping out a tribe.

"This is horrible enough, is it not, my Lord Cecil and most venerable Archbishop?"

"It was two Englishmen who initiated bacteriological warfare."—United Press.

Japan Sets Record In Wool Exports
London, Apr. 25.

JAPAN established a record in its wool trade last year, according to the February issue of the British Imperial Economic Committee's "Intelligence notes."

Its imports of the raw material, amounted to 243,000,000 pounds, being 61,000,000 more than in 1934 and 4,000,000 more than the 1933 record.

The activity of the trade is also shown by the fact that Japanese exports of wool tissues reached a new high level of 23,500,000 square yards.

Mechanisation Plans For Maginot Line

FRENCH CALL FOR MOTORISED ARMY

NEW VOLUNTEER FORCE LIKELY

Paris, April 20.

ONE of the first measures which the new French Parliament will discuss when it meets in May will, it is believed, be a law for the enrolment of a body of volunteers serving for five years, and entrusted with the formation of highly developed mechanised units of tanks, motorised artillery, and infantry.

Writing in the Revue Hebdomadaire, a military critic declares that the army is not properly equipped to man the Maginot Line of fortifications on the eastern frontier.

He points out that not only have the forts to be manned, but the gaps between the forts must be filled with field works occupied with infantry and artillery.

The Echos de Paris urges that steps should be taken to build up an army corps of professional soldiers capable of manoeuvring with great rapidity and therefore able to deal with the situation that would arise should the Maginot Line be placed.

MYSTERY GUN

A mystery gun capable of firing an 8 inch shell more than 30 miles is believed to have been produced recently by German technical experts, according to the Paris Evening Star.

French authorities, it is stated, believe that the German divisional artillery will soon be equipped with guns of a range more than 10 miles in excess of the French divisions. The German infantry are stated to be equipped with:

Air-cooled machine-guns capable of 100 rounds a minute and of penetrating 11-in. thick armoured plate at 1,000 yards.

Anti-tank guns, firing 15 shells a minute, which can be taken over every type of ground.

The construction of an enormous mould 50 yards long at the great Krupp munition works, is believed to indicate that guns of 22 in. are to be produced and that several guns of 16 in. calibre have been made.

"Tich" Proctor is the new Royal Marines bugler on H.M.S. Sussex, now at Alexandria. Height 4 ft. 4 in., weight 75 lb. Here he is inspecting the guns which will assist him.

Stiffer Test for King's Cup Pilots

"OLD CROCKS" WILL HAVE LITTLE CHANCE

REGULATIONS governing the King's Cup Air Race, to be flown from Hatfield airdrome, Herts, on July 10 and 11, have now been completed.

No pilot will be allowed to take part who has not gathered a minimum of 100 hours' solo flying experience before the race.

On Friday, July 10, there will be an eliminating contest covering this course of 612 miles:

Hatfield—Norwich: 91 miles.

Norwich—Nottingham: 103 miles.

Nottingham—Bristol: 121 miles.

Bristol—High Post (Wilts): 40 miles.

High Post—Shoreham: 69 miles.

Shoreham—Coventry: 120 miles.

Coventry—Hatfield: 68 miles.

Control at end of first circuit.

Competitors have to complete two circuits of this course and will thus be flying over 1,200 miles in the one day.

On the second day, July 11, there will be a final race of 350 miles.

The course has been selected to avoid crossing the Pennines or the sea, since it is considered inadvisable to encourage flights in single-engine machines racing "full out" over big stretches of water.

This was tried last year when one competitor was forced to come down in the Irish Sea through engine trouble. Fortunately a steamer was at hand to save him.

There are three classes of entrants for this eliminating contest. Class A will comprise the light aeroplanes whose horse power is under 150.

Class B will consist of single-engine machines of greater horse power.

Class C will comprise the multi-engine machines with no restriction on horse power. The latter machines can also be entered in either class A or B.

On July 11 the final will be flown on a course round Hatfield, consisting, like last year, of several laps of about 50 miles each to make up a total race of 350 miles.

By allowing the spectator to perform the act Cotton, strictly speaking, committed a breach of the rules, involving a penalty of two strokes.

From the point of view of equity the committee, quite rightly in their opinion, decided that Cotton had incurred no penalty.

Cotton's round of 75, which put him out of the running, was full of incidents. On more than one occasion, in obvious annoyance at missing a short putt, he banged the ball on the green.

"I took 39 putts, missing seven of off and less. It is incredible," said Cotton.

At the twelfth hole Cotton's tee shot came to rest on a spectator's mackintosh, which was lying on the ground near the green. Cotton asked the spectator to remove the garment, which he did, at the same time picking up the ball and replacing it.

Cotton then played the shot. The question arose: Had Cotton incurred a penalty?

The rule on the point states clearly that a ball lying on clothes may be dropped or placed by the player, not nearer the hole, without penalty.

By allowing the spectator to perform the act Cotton, strictly speaking, committed a breach of the rules, involving a penalty of two strokes.

From the point of view of equity the committee, quite rightly in their opinion, decided that Cotton had incurred no penalty.

Cotton's round of 75, which put him out of the running, was full of incidents. On more than one occasion, in obvious annoyance at missing a short putt, he banged the ball on the green.

"I took 39 putts, missing seven of off and less. It is incredible," said Cotton.

COUNT McCORMACK IS RETIRING—What Can I Do With Him? Sighs Wife

JOHN, COUNT McCORMACK, has announced his coming retirement. The golden harvest has been reaped.

Nearly thirty years ago he came to London, a handsome Irish boy with nothing but a voice of the finest texture and a shrewd brain to serve him.

For a while he earned shillings. Then he sang at Covent Garden. The purity of that voice—for he was no actor—brought the house to its feet.

From that day—October 15, 1907—until to-day, he has walked knee deep amid an ever ripening harvest. No earthly voice has ever earned tribute so rich. Millions have been paid to hear the voice of the peasant boy.

He went to America with Caruso. He conquered New York in a night.

His wealth grew to be enormous. No singer has ever amassed a fortune so great. Honours fell upon him. The Legion of Honour. The Pope conferred on him the title of Papal Count.

He made £100,000 with one film. He bought the most beautiful home in California.

When a relative was drowned, leaving a widow and seven children, he adopted them all. He has two children, but his adopted family is enormous.

There will be scenes of emotion when he sings at the Albert Hall on Sunday.

I spoke to his tiny wife recently, writes a correspondent. She smiled at me in a puzzled way. "What is one to do with a man of his awful energy, still young, when he retires?"

"With all his work during these years he still has had vitality enough to exhaust us all. What will it be like now, in retirement? He will be too much for me to manage."

The clear golden voice of the harpist rang across the room. "And is this the thanks I get? When I did it all for the love of ye?"

He grabbed my arm. "She'll perfect a technique of gentle bullying as effective as that she has used during the last thirty years."

I left them as I first saw them years ago—like children having a "let's pretend" squabble.

He Lived Alone On Desert Island

WORLD'S champion hobo, Mr. Eric Muspratt has just returned to Britain from another adventure.

With two friends he left Gibraltar last October to cross the Atlantic in a 50-year-old 20-ton cutter.

The journey was completed in eight days, and on the voyage across the Atlantic the three adventurers lived on flying fish which came aboard out of the sea.

On a desert isle, Mr. Muspratt lived for 16 days and ate nothing but octopus.

"Here," Mr. Muspratt said, "I experienced the only real hardship."

"I discarded every stitch of clothing, and I was faced with the prospect of catching and cooking my food by whatever means I could devise."

"I remembered that the octopus was a very delicate dish and set out to catch one with my hands."

"I became quite expert at catching the young ones, but had to take the greatest care in avoiding their parents."

"I was glad to get back to the luxury of our yawl some miles away off the coast of Grenada."

"Soon after I struck inland and stayed with a tribe of natives who treated me as a king."

"I lived in a disused hut in their village and wore a pair of shorts and a singlet. Many of my neighbours wore nothing at all."

"Now I suppose I'll stay in England for a few months before I set off to some other part of the world—where, heaven only knows."

ENGLISH BANKS TO USE ROBOT DEPOSIT CLERK

London, Apr. 28. "Incassomat" is the name of the new robot bank clerk, invented by Fritz Knubbe, a Swiss, and shortly to be introduced experimentally into banks in Britain.

"Incassomat" puts a bank receiving clerk at the disposal of the public at any time of the day or night. Each user has a key, which when partially inserted in a lock opens trays for the reception of copper, silver, banknotes and even registered letters. Every deposit is photographed, and in the case of registered letters, weighed.

LOVE FEUD SHOOTING; TWO DEAD

"THE HAND WITH A REVOLVER"

Paris, Apr. 20.

Tense passions of a primitive people; a Corsican love-feud; the shooting of a five-year-old boy in the arms of his mother in a Montmartre underworld cafe; the murder of a man—these are the themes of a story told in court here to-day.

In the dock stood a small, wizened, dour man, Paul Stefani, who replied to all questions with a strange, fierce indifference.

It was alleged by the prosecution that two Corsicans, Angelino Fonta and his lover, Madeline Keuch, who had their child in her arms, were in a cafe called "The Dead Rat."

OATH IN HOSPITAL

Then, it was asserted, the door opened, and a hand with a revolver appeared. Shots were fired. The child was killed. Madeline and Fonta were seriously wounded.

After a chase Stefani was arrested by a policeman, who is stated to have been an eye-witness of the shooting.

In hospital Fonta was heard talking excitedly in Corsican to a friend, who, before quitting the bedside, raised his hand for the "Corsican oath" and kissed Fonta fervently.

An hour later Stefani's brother was found shot dead in a Montmartre bar.

Stefani to-day denied that first shooting, and alleged that it was the act of his brother.

Faithful to the unwritten law of a Corsican vendetta, Fonta and Madeline refused to disclose their aggressor's identity.

THE POTSDAM FAST TIMES BETWEEN EUROPE AND EAST

The N. D. L. liner Potsdam is due in Hongkong about noon on Sunday and will sail for Europe at 10 p.m. the same day. The ship is due in Singapore at daylight on May 8 after a 21-day trip from Singapore to Kobe and return. She will have taken 11 days to do the round trip to Japan from Hongkong and back to this port.

Comparisons are difficult to make, especially as the fastest ship on the Far Eastern Service, the Italian liner Victoria, makes Shanghai her terminus and does not call at Manila on her outward passage, but the Potsdam's performance on her present voyage is outstanding and constitutes a record for ships which run from Singapore to Japan. Hers is also the fastest run ever made by a passenger ship from Europe to Japan and return. Yokohama being the only port which she omitted from her regular ports of call, the Potsdam has so far put up a particularly good performance and at the present rate should return to Southampton on Friday, May 29, having left there on March 27 at 2 p.m.

She is due at Marseilles on May 24—considerably less than 21 days out from Hongkong, and having called at all her regular ports and loaded nearly 12,000 tons of cargo for Europe, apart from her cargo for intermediate ports.

The usual schedule of the Potsdam calls for a speed of about 20 knots, while on her present trip she has maintained a little over 22 knots.

Blue Riband Winner

This successful trip is not a little due to Captain Wilhelm Daehe, Commander of the Potsdam for this trip, and normally head of the Nautical Department of the N.D.L.

As Captain of the Bremen, crack ship of the German merchant marine, Captain Daehe won for his country the Blue Riband for a Far Eastern trip, for he set up a record on his outward voyage 19 days from Bremen to Singapore, and 24 and a half days from Southampton to Hongkong.

The fast run out was the result of a plan to catch up to the Potsdam's schedule, the ship have being delayed nearly a fortnight on her voyage from Germany to England owing to trouble with a burst oil pipe.

Captain Daehe was probably the first man to reach Hongkong who has thoroughly inspected the Queen Mary. "I am sure that the Queen Mary will break the record set up by the Normandie," he said in an interview. "She is a wonderful ship, as I know, for the Bremen was at Southampton when the Queen Mary arrived from the Clyde and I had the opportunity of going aboard and seeing the ship."
"The Queen Mary should keep for Britain her proud place on the seas and help maintain her position as the

MACAO ELECTRIC SUPPLY

TAX LIKELY TO BE MODIFIED

Macao, Apr. 29.
Following the announcement of a decision by the Macao Government to submit recommendations to Lisbon for modifications in the control of electrical installations in Macao, there has been a rising demand for electrical connections. It is reported by officers of the Macao Electric Lighting Company, Ltd., that fifty fifteen per cent. of consumers who had given up using electricity following enforcement in Macao of the Electric Industry Fiscalization Tax, applied for restoration of the service in the first three days after the announcement of the modification.
At the time of enforcement of the Decree, on instructions from Lisbon, early last year, local business men submitted representations to the Government asking for changes to suit local conditions, but it does not seem to have been possible to obtain permission from the Central Authorities to bring about any changes at that time, and a steady decrease in the number of users of electricity in Macao was the result.

The Fiscalization Tax in its original form required all consumers to submit their installations to periodical inspection by the authorities and involved a registration of the exact load of each installation, the tax varying on a sliding scale with the size and nature of the installation, payable in advance, but the changes that the Macao authorities are now recommending will modify the tax so that it will be based on the size of the meter and be considerably less than the old one, each consumer being permitted to modify his installation to suit his own convenience without reference to the authorities for each change, the tax being collected by monthly instalments by the Company, with their regular bill for energy consumed, while small flat rate consumers paying less than a certain sum will be entirely exempt.
It is stated officially that the recommendations of the Macao Government have been submitted by Air Mail to Lisbon and it is generally thought that formal approval by the Lisbon Government will be given by about the middle of May.—Our Own Correspondent.

One case each of Small-pox, Diphtheria and Typhoid were reported to the local Health authorities on Wednesday.

The Gneisenau, sister ship to the Potsdam, is running to schedule on her trip out and is due here on May 5 at daylight. She left Singapore on Thursday morning. She will sail the same afternoon for Shanghai and Japan.

"Now, Ah-Ying," said the officer on duty to a Chinese, "you are charged with conducting games of chance, to wit, Pai Kau and Ta Kai. Have you anything to say in answer to the charge?" "Why, yes, sir," he replied. "Me no play games of chance. Cards all marked and dice loaded. Me win all the time—no chance at all."

RE-ALLOCATION OF MANDATES?

Following the frequent categorical denials that Britain has any intention of transferring to other nations any of the mandated territories which she holds, some confusion may be created by the suggestion now put forward at Home that the colonial problem might be settled by the Powers at present operating mandates surrendering them for re-allocation. It is suggested that if this method were followed, Germany and Italy might secure a share of such territories. It was only a few days ago that Mr. Baldwin declared, once again, in the House of Commons that the British Government had not considered and was not considering, the transfer of any of these mandated areas. A point, which must be kept in mind in this connection, however, is that it is one thing for Britain to contemplate unilateral action in this matter, and quite another for her to consider the possibility of some re-adjustment in common with other nations holding mandates. Indeed, it would seem that this latter contingency is not altogether ruled out, for responsible British statesmen have laid stress on the point that there could not be any question of Britain giving up her mandates irrespective of the policy of other nations in this matter. Sight must not be lost, either, of the statement by Mr. Baldwin that the question of the transfer of a mandate, if it were to be contemplated, would be subject to procedure of an elaborate nature, and one that could not be subject to any sudden or hasty decision. So far as Britain is concerned, however, Mr. Baldwin has made it clear that there is no intention of the Government itself raising the question, although he added that if the matter of the future status of these territories is raised, the Government will not commit itself to any settlement without giving the House of Commons the fullest opportunity for discussion. Reading between the lines, it would seem that the position is that, whilst not anxious that the matter should be

The Treaty Must

Be Torn Up

YEAR after year the French have pushed the logic of the Versailles Treaty towards its inevitable results; and never are the French more logical than when starting off from a false premise. That false premise is the Treaty of Versailles itself, and for the peace of the world it is imperative that that treaty be torn up by the signatory nations themselves and a new treaty made between free peoples determined to live their lives in peace.

What Will Be

The Result?

WE are now in the illogical and fatuous position of having to ask an outlawed Italy to help France and England keep a sovereign people in subjection in their own country. And if Germany refuses to be so dragooned; and if we do send troops into their land; and if there should be but one little frontier incident—what will be the result? It will be war... a real bitter, grinding war, followed by international revolution.

That is whether the Governments of France and England are heading, and that is why it is time we stopped this nonsense at once.

The French are on the verge of their general elections. Those elections are going to the Left, when finance will see to it that the franc will fall as a result. In what position will France be to face a championing Germany then?

Find The Cause Of

Economic Ills

BUT that will not be enough. Added to the injustices of that treaty are the economic injustices of the world, the tariff barriers, the gambling and speculation, and the vast canker of unemployment.

There must be a real economic conference allied to the new peace proposals, wherein the nations can earnestly try to find the cause of their economic ills and thereby set Europe on its true road to internal and external peace.

We Must Break

With The Past

WAR is a frequent and logical consequence of unsatisfactory trade and economic misery, and if peace is to be assured, our economic ills must be conquered, and at the same time as we sign a Peace Treaty of Free Peoples.

Let the meeting-place be Berlin. Let us go there, to make genuine pledges for peace and sanity. Let us bury the Treaty of Versailles and the aggressive Treaty of Locarno once and for all.

Treaty of Versailles and the aggressive Treaty of Locarno once and for all.

It is all very well for our rulers to imagine that they can get us safely out of this present mess, but it will be impossible without a completely new spirit and a definite break with the past.

Great Britain.

Alone Can Do It

IS the National Government of Great Britain strong enough to do this?—for it will have to be done by somebody, for the simple reason that the people of Great Britain will not stand for a war against Germany or anyone else.

French fear and German sense of inferiority are impossible bed-fellows. Great Britain alone can calm the one and cure the other. Let our Foreign Secretary inform the world of what we all know at heart—that the Versailles Treaty is a bad treaty, and that, from the end of this week, it shall cease to exist.

Now... Before It

Is Too Late

GIVE us a human treaty of mutual economic aid; give us a treaty of international friendship, a treaty that shall mark a new era of good will and sanity.

Tear up the Versailles Treaty now before it is too late, or those that are sent out to war will return with hatred in their heart, not for the enemy but for those who denied them their sacred right to live and labour for the good of the world.

PHYSICAL TRAINING EXERCISES

By a PHYSICAL TRAINING
INSTRUCTOR

Useful To All

It makes no difference what the defect or age is, special exercises can be given to improve one physically, to improve the digestion, nerves, spinal curvature, stiff joints, tight muscles, narrow chest, bad breathing, or any of the 101 ailments the body is subject to. Fifty per cent. of those people who run to their doctor could keep the fee in their pocket by doing that five minutes daily.

I read, the other day in an article on physical training that there is a danger for a tired business man in doing physical exercises for fear of over-strain. I answer that by saying that the business man will not be tired physically, if he does them regularly, and they will certainly help to lessen his mental strain. That is what they are meant to do, by a co-ordination of the mind and body.

It is only commonsense that a combination of well-balanced brain and brawn will harmonise better than a strong brain and a soft body. To the tired business man I would say start on the five minutes a day, and you will feel a different man by the end of your Sunday's golf (after the first month), but you must put all you've got into that five minutes.

Rugby players, who at this time of the season, when accidents and pulled muscles occur more frequently through overtraining and staidness, need not pay a doctor's fee to have his fingers dug into your muscles, and after having given you a sweet (this from personal experience) to be advised to get massage (another fee), but go to a good football trainer or physical training instructor. Don't ask to see their diplomas (Sir Herbert Barker didn't have any.) They both know their anatomy and will put you right if it is anything less than a fracture.

Fit As Fiddlers

Many of these accidents are caused through want of loosening exercises after strenuous play. I am daily treating past and present Rugby internationalists for these sorts of things, and they all come back and tell me the results following advice given, and to get little alterations in exercises as physical training is progressive and requires to be strengthened from time to time.

As my job is a whole-time one as physical training instructor, what I do for others apart from that is just my hobby, and I have therefore never accepted a fee, but just to see those whom I have advised come and say they are fit as fiddlers again, is payment indeed.

QUITE a lot has been written about physical training by doctors and schoolmasters, dealing with the subject from a schoolboy and schoolgirl point of view, up to the age of perhaps 18 years. Some opinions have been good, some not so good, and others show a lack of knowledge on the subject.

Physical exercises in the first place were introduced after many years of study and experiments, to benefit people of both sexes, of any age, and almost any physical infirmity, and have proved their value when done under the instruction or advice of a qualified instructor, who is well up in his anatomy and knows the working of muscles and joints.

Having dealt with cases of all ages, from the perfectly fit to people suffering from all kinds of ailments, over a number of years, I have no hesitation in saying that any class of person seriously taking up physical exercises cannot but improve their health.

In the old gymnastic days the external muscles were so developed that quick bending movements were almost a danger. Very little attention was paid to internal muscles and organs, which are of far more importance if one is aiming to keep fit and agile. To-day, a start is made with a view to getting the inside right first by doing the exercises which massage the muscles attached to everything of importance inside the frame. When the digestive system is in good working order, and the heart, lungs, &c., have more room to work through increased capacity, one can gradually extend and strengthen the exercises.

Bedtime Best

Then there are exercises for the nervous system. The highly strung, jumpy person need not do any vigorous movements, but a concentration for a few months on balance, &c., will work wonders.

I would like to convince those interested in the subject that by doing their daily dozen regularly, they will feel an improvement after the first month. I have proved that before going to bed is the best and most convenient time to do them, when there are no clothes to restrict movement. I have worked out a table of exercises which covers every muscle and joint in the body, and takes only five minutes but don't have a heavy supper at, say, ten o'clock, and start exercises at 10.15 give your digestive organs a chance to do a bit of work in between.

Personally, I don't give a hoot for text-book methods, but work out my own exercises according to the defect in the person asking advice. I would like to quote just a few cases to convince anyone who may have similar defects in the body.

A schoolboy of 16 was sent to me by his father, who noted which end, "This boy is a weak heart, please take him to your invalids' class." He must not be allowed to run, walk fast, or do exercises. I sent the boy back and asked for a free hand, as the boy would have been wasting his time watching the others work. I was then told to carry on as I thought fit, and by simple easy exercises, the muscles round the heart were strengthened, then extended to other parts of the body and limbs. Two years later, the same boy won his heat in a mile race on one day, and ran second in the final open to his school on the next. He also passed a swimming test of 50 yards.

A Rugby Recovery

Another boy, perhaps a year older, came to me and asked if I could help him, he had been injured in a Rugby game. The injury was supposed to be in the spine as he could not bend his body forward, and he had been told that his Rugby days were almost certainly finished. I massaged the damaged part for a week until the muscles were loosened, then started physical exercises which, combined with a little daily massage, I continued for a few months. He played all his last season in his school 1st XV, went on to play regularly for his college, and gained a running Blue.

Just one more cure of an apparently permanent defect, obtained by nothing but purely physical training exercises. This was a boy whose one shoulder was four inches lower than the other, and who was absolutely square in six months.

There is nothing wonderful in the cure of any of these defects, but I do for others apart from that is just my hobby, and I have therefore never accepted a fee, but just to see those whom I have advised come and say they are fit as fiddlers again, is payment indeed.

In my own case I had a rough time for two years in the First World War, but thanks to physical training in my 55th year I can lead a gym. squad over the horse, parallel bars, or obstacle race, run a fast 100 or 200 yards, and do any old contortion, but I am firmly convinced that had not been for doing my daily dozen regularly I should have been a wreck long ago.

Village Abandoned To Mercy Of The Sea

ANZAC DAY IN HONGKONG

Despite the rain a large crowd gathered at the Cenotaph on Saturday to participate in the wreath laying ceremonies in connection with Anzac Day celebrations.

679 PEOPLE LOSE HOMES

Haverfordwest, April 20.

A MROTH, a pretty little Pembrokeshire village of 679 people, is to be abandoned to the mercy of the sea. Its doom was pronounced by the county council roads committee at Haverfordwest last month.

The villagers must lose their homes. According to the clerk of the council (Mr. R. A. Wheatley), replying to a councillor, they can claim no compensation.

The Pembrokeshire County Council has already spent several thousand pounds on sea defences there to protect the county road which runs through the village and acts as a breakwater.

The clerk explained that their consulting engineers had told them that about £30,000 was necessary to provide adequate defence works for the village.

"WASTE OF MONEY"

The county council sub-committee recommend that no further expenditure should be incurred on the roads beyond surface maintenance.

The chairman, Mr. V. J. G. Johns: "We are told it will be an absolute waste of money. Our new road is almost washed away."

"We were told many years ago," declared Alderman B. G. Llewellyn, of Fishguard, "that it would be better to move the whole village than go to the expense of providing defence works."

Major R. C. Barclay, of Manorbier: "When the road goes the village will go with it."

The clerk: "If it goes our liability has gone."

Divided Fleet Blunder

LESSON OF THE RAID ON SCARBOROUGH

The battleship is the backbone of naval strength, and is likely to remain so. Battleships must always be able to concentrate in order to oppose any challenge to their supremacy.

These are the conclusions of Commander John Creswell in his book, "Naval Warfare."

Writing of the mistake of dividing a battle fleet without adequate reason, Commander Creswell points out that, on the occasion of the Scarborough raid, a single battle squadron was sent in support of our battle cruisers because it was assumed that the German High Sea Fleet would not be at sea, and because it was desired to avoid exposing the main force of the battle fleet to risk of torpedoes and mines.

"Had it not been for the half-hearted way in which it (the German High Sea Fleet) was handled, the events of that day might well have been disastrous for the British Empire. Important principles were neglected, and six battleships sent to a position 350 miles from the remainder, a position in which, although unknown to the time, they were in fact less than 20 miles from the full force of the German Fleet and in danger of being cut off."

STRATEGICAL DIFFICULTIES

Commander Creswell has no illusions regarding the difficulty of British Naval strategy. He makes it clear that our problems in the last war were simplified by the relative geographical positions of Great Britain and Germany and, writing of the problems which will have to be faced may well make the strategy of the last war appear, as in fact it was, a comparatively simple problem.

A clear idea of the need of the British Empire for large numbers of warships with which to protect its vital trade may be obtained from Commander Creswell's survey of the trade defence position in 1914. Germany, apart from the short-lived operations of the Goeben and Breslau, had only eight cruisers and a few armed merchantmen outside the North Sea, while, against this, the British and Australian Navies disposed no fewer than 53 cruisers (including one battle-cruiser) and 19 armed merchantmen, and had the assistance of seven French, ten Japanese, and two Russians.

THE AIR MENACE

Commander Creswell deals faithfully with the air menace and, without seeking to minimise it, comes to the conclusion that "when one takes all these matters into consideration there seems strong ground for believing that a fleet of battleships is a more effective basis for the control of sea communications than a force of aircraft embodying a similar or even substantially greater proportion of national effort."

In his foreword to his book, which is a clear and closely reasoned survey of the activities of the British Navy in time of war, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes writes: "Judging by the complacency with which some of our failures, and the loss of golden opportunities, are still regarded by the Service generally, the rising generation of naval officers would do well to take these maxims to heart."

VETERANS OF FUTURE WARS ORGANIZED

Princeton, N.J., Apr. 20.

The "Veterans of Future Wars," organized by satirical students at Princeton University, has issued a manifesto demanding immediate payment of a $1,000 bonus to potential soldiers.

They also urged formation of a companion organization, "The Association of Gold Star Mothers of the Veterans of Future Wars," and announced a chapter was already being organized at Vassar, college for women. Membership in this organization is open to all mothers and prospective mothers.

The joke is spreading. It appears. A dozen universities have requested chapters of the organization, and hundreds of students are joining. Twenty-five cents is collected from every member when he joins.

Ex-Soldier Claims To Know Burial Place Of £1,750,000 In Gold

Berlin, April 20.

UNEMPLOYED German ex-soldier Karl Todt, wandering the streets of Guisburg, in the Rhineland, with only a few pence in his pocket, claims to know the secret burial place of £1,750,000.

Girl-Wife Betrays Spy

Sees Husband Banished

"I Want To Forget"

Metz, Franco-German Frontier, April 20.

A LOVELY girl-wife—known as "The Star of Morocco"—torn between love for her husband, whom she knew to be a spy, and loyalty to her country, finally betraying him to the military authorities and seeing him sentenced to imprisonment and banishment. Such was the dramatic story unfolded in the Sessional Court here when Charles Criddle, adjutant in the French Army, attached to the 402nd Anti-Aircraft Regiment, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, ten years' banishment, with a fine of £200.

He was also deprived of all military and civil rights.

Professor Altmeyer, a German agent to whom Criddle was said to have sold military secrets at Saarbrücken, received similar sentences and was fined £100.

Madame Criddle, who is only 20 and who was also accused of espionage, was acquitted because she helped to bring her husband and Altmeyer before the court.

She gained the title of "Star of Morocco" in a beauty competition in Rabat, where she lived with her parents.

"A NEW LIFE" A young officer attached to the 402nd Anti-Aircraft Regiment, whose name was not disclosed, told how he was commissioned to watch Criddle and how he made love to Mme. Criddle to gain her confidence.

After they had known each other for some months Mme. Criddle intercepted a letter which her husband had written to Altmeyer. The letter was altered and sent in the form of an invitation to the German agent to cross the frontier.

Altmeyer, thinking Criddle had important information for him, travelled to Metz, and was immediately arrested. Criddle was arrested later. Mme. Criddle said after the trial: "Now it is all over I am going to start life afresh. It was a dreadful decision to have to make—and even now I am not sure I was right in helping to betray my own husband. I am going to try to forget it all."

"The Only Man"

"In the battle that followed all my comrades who knew about the treasure were killed."

"I was taken prisoner. I am the only man who knows exactly where that money was buried."

Karl gave evidence at Guisburg yesterday during the hearing of an embezzlement charge brought against one of the organizers in Germany of an "expedition" which never got beyond making plans. The defendant, whose name has been kept secret, was acquitted.

It was stated during the hearing that the sum of money to which Todt refers had been sent to Palestine by the Munich Mint during the war, and had never been recovered.

P. C. WHO NEVER SHAVED

M. LECLERC

Why He Kept His Waist-Long Beard

FRANCE'S most picturesque police constable retired today. He is M. Leclerc, better known as "Agent 2009."

His long beard, reaching down below his waist, and huge moustachios have made him known to hundreds of thousands.

For 16 years he has directed traffic around the Porte St. Denis—and he always refused promotion, saying he preferred to remain where people expected to see him.

Motorists used to shake him by the hand as they passed, for M. Leclerc had a code of signals all his own and was regarded as the most efficient traffic controller in Paris.

Asked why he grew such a long beard and such huge moustachios, he once replied, "They make me conspicuous to motorists." In his spare time he has painted many pictures and is also a sculptor.

BRITISH HARD COURT CHAMPIONSHIP SURPRISES

PONIES TO RACE UNDER THEIR NEW CLASSIFICATION

ROYAL SCOT'S PENALTY FOR CLEVER WIN

BIGGEST PROBLEM TO-MORROW IS TO SECURE THE DOUBLE

ABLE AMAZON STILL ON SICK LIST.

(By "Captain Foster")

After the Easter Meeting, several Australian and China Ponies were promoted and demoted by the Classification Sub-Committee and the list was published in this paper sometime last week. The inclusion of Honeymoon Eve and Royal Scot in the "A" standard was a foregone conclusion, owing to the smart display by Honeymoon Eve in the Morrison Hill "B" class Handicap run on Easter Monday, and it will be recalled that her time of the race was only three-fifths of a second outside of the track record held by Apollo. It may seem a bit hard on Royal Scot that she should be promoted to "A" class in view of the fact that she had not contested in a "B" class event, but it is obvious that the classification sub-committee were not taking any chances after her clever win in the St. George's Plate, when she covered the champion course in 2.35.1/5.

Both Honeymoon Eve and Royal Scot have been entered for the main event, the Mount Parker Handicap "A" Class over 1 1/4 miles to be staged to-morrow and no doubt the running of these two mares will be watched with much interest. There are eight other events of the card and apportioning the winners in the Daily Double Event will be a problem. Punters have a beautiful "menu" of 22 competitors from whom to select the second leg of the double, and the adjustment of poundage by the weight assigner has undoubtedly put some "pep" in the event, which is the Tai-Mo-Shan Handicap for "B" class ponies over six furlongs.

It is learned with regret that Able Amazon is "dicky," her last appearance being when she gave Strathgrym a beating in the Australian Ponies Champions at the Annual Race Meeting. This mare is causing some anxiety to her connections and if she does not face the starter at the Fifth Extra Meeting to be held on May 10, Able Amazon will be barred from the Queensland Autumn Champions to be run at the end of the fall.

It may not be known that the heavy state of the going at the Annual Carnival was responsible for many casualties among the Australian Ponies, and, of course, the winner of the Rother Hill Derby, Holiday Eve, winner of the Sydney Maidens, and Lancashire Lad, winner of Perth Plate, are long overdue to appear in public.

Mr. S. C. Liang, who has won innumerable races up in Peking, Tientsin and Tsingtau will make his debut to-morrow and I understand that his best mount of the meeting will be King's Jubilee in the High West Handicap for "B" class China Ponies.

MORE ENGLISH FOOTBALL

Clearing Up A Few Outstanding Games

London, April 30.
Several more "clearing up" football matches in the English League were played to-day prior to the season's concluding programme on Saturday.

In the second division Norwich beat Bradford 4-1 and Hull did well to scratch a point from Sheffield United, the teams sharing four goals. In the northern section of the third division Carlisle playing at home drew two all with Barrow.

A friendly match played in London between Clapton Orient and Mordenwell saw the Orient win by a goal to nothing. —Reuter.

Big Start Expected In Opening Race

HALCYON TO BE WATCHED

The first saddling bell will be rung at 1.30 p.m., and I expect all the entries will weigh out for the opening event, Charters Towers Handicap for "B" class Australian ponies over a mile. Night Star, Rose-Ann, Snowy River and The Dunlin, who were recently demoted from the "A" standard, are top-weight carriers and their chief rival will be Ranger, who has been kindly treated.

Halcyon, who has been knocking the door since February last, will be racing under the silk of Mr. Dunbar instead of Lady Southey's colours, and it is hoped that the change of ownership will bring better luck. There is no denying that Halcyon does not like the sight of the barrier, but although he was badly left, Mr. Dunbar managed to steer him to a third place in the Coolgarlie Handicap over a sprint of five furlongs run on Easter Monday. To-morrow the distance is a mile and for a long shot, he is certainly worth $5 each way.

Ranger got a thrashing from The Dunlin in the Blue Mountain Plate, but although he was badly left, Mr. Dunbar managed to steer him to a third place in the Coolgarlie Handicap over a sprint of five furlongs run on Easter Monday. To-morrow the distance is a mile and for a long shot, he is certainly worth $5 each way.

HARVEST VIEW SHOULD WIN

BUT GREAT HALL IS RIVAL

By virtue of winning the Jockey Club Cup at Macao last Sunday, Great Hall has incurred a penalty of 7 lbs. and as the pony will be taken out by the second whip Mr. H. Botelho who will no doubt claim 5 lbs. Jockey allowance, Great Hall will have to carry 2 lbs. in addition to the weight allotted, namely 160 lbs. in the Mount Davis (First Section) for "C" class China Ponies over a mile. If this Dun pony can reproduce the Macao form, he should be well up at the finish and likewise his stable companion High Speed.

Harvest View, who has a sequence of six unplaced outings in better fields, has been given the post of honour with 108 lbs. and he should have no trouble to make his acquaintance with the judges. Mr. P. ("Pinky") Botelho has been booked to pilot his old friend Ribble and it will be recalled that this combination gave the St. Andrew's Cup to the owner, Mr. Grayburn last November. With Mr. Botelho at the wheel, Ribble will surely be one of the favourites. Boalot Bay, who was second in the Kellett Handicap, has not much of a lead to carry and Dawn Star is well in with only 150 lbs. These two ponies are dangerous.

THE BEST STAYER WILL WIN

FIRST LEG OF DOUBLE

CYCLAMEN BAY FANCIED

The first leg of the Daily Double is on the High West Handicap for "B" class China Ponies over 1 1/4 miles and the problem is to find the best stayer. Major Shannon's Cyclamen Bay can no doubt last the distance and is assessed at 8 lbs. over the weight for inches, while Sadko is given scale basis. The first time these two met was in the Morrison Hill "B" class and being a sprint event, both finished unplaced. In the Hongkang Bay Handicap over a course from the two mile post, once round and in, contested on March 28, Sadko, the winner, had a pull of 3 lbs. against Mistake Bay, who was second, but to-morrow the position is reversed and under the circumstances there should be a good tussle between Cyclamen Bay, Sadko and Mistake Bay.

Pontiac Bay is nicely in with only 148 lbs. to shoulder and is dangerous with a novice on account of the 5 lbs. allowance. The stable "Lan" has three nominations in Bright View, Jungle Jim and Soldier of China, and anyone from this outfit can do the trick. I hear that Bear Claw put up a good gallop on Tuesday morning and is dangerous to upset the applicant.

A GOOD FIELD

For The Sixth Race

There will be a good field in the second section of Mount Davis Handicap for "C" class China Ponies and the inclusion of Glorious View, Tyne and Wadebridge in this class will make the race more interesting. Victoria Hall, who won the Kellett Handicap (Second Section) has been well looked after by the official gentleman, and Flybynight, who was nosed out by High Honour in the same race for second position in the frame, got no allowance for a beating. Valorous, Donovan and King's Sceptre have been well treated and I certainly like Donovan's chance with Tyne and Flybynight following in the rear.

BOXING EVE IS RED HOT

To Win The Final Race

It is to be regretted that the conditions (Ponies that have won $450, or less in stakes since 1st January 1936) of the final race of the Mount Davis Handicap "D" class, have precluded several bad uns from running, more so, that the race is to be ridden by novice jockeys. There are only eight entries and should all accept, there will be at least over half-a-dozen novices lining up along the rails with racing fans to do the shouting.

Boxing Eve should start a red hot favourite and Gold Sovereign and Seventeenth of September should follow. Mr. Harris is going to pilot either Boxing Eve or Philanderer, and Mr. H. Botelho, who rode a clever race to victory on Gold Sovereign, will have the same mount. Mr. W. H. Choy is going to steer Seventeenth of September, but his brother, Mr. W. C. Choy, has no mount.

To-day's Training Times

Nominees for to-morrow's race meeting were out in full force at Happy Valley this morning and did the usual training runs. Tabulated times returned for each quarter will appear in our final edition this afternoon.

OUGHT TO BE A DEAD HEAT

If Form Is Good

An easy win of three lengths has cost Herod a penalty of 17 lbs. in the main event, the Mount Parker Handicap for "A" class China Ponies over the champion course and both Honeymoon Eve and Royal Scot are set to carry weight for inches. King's Warden has been asked to concede 3 lbs. to Herod and if we were to take into consideration the form displayed by these two ponies in the New Stables Plate run on the first day of the Annual Meeting, there should be a dead-heat.

We should see a good race and it cannot be argued that the new comers Honeymoon Eve and Royal Scot have no say in the main event. It must be admitted that Honeymoon Eve's performance in the Morrison Hill "B" class handicap was an eye opener to all, and the manner in which she finished the race was impressive. It is learned that Cosens's Beauty, Diana Bay and Soldier of Britain are well tuned for the big race and it is not easy to spot the winner.

I like Ocean View's chance for the "Hunchbacks" Plate over five furlongs for non-winning Sub-Griffins of this season, but, have no hesitation in saying that the race is somewhat slow at the gate, and Cassius and Stop-watch should fill the minor places. Being a sprint race, the start means a lot and I understand that Mr. Froulx, who is rated as the best flier, is going to steer Cassius.

TWENTY-TWO ENTRIES

FOR TAIMOSHAN HANDICAP

There are no less than 22 entries for the Tai-Mo-Shan Handicap "D" class over six furlongs and this, incidentally, is the second leg of the daily double. A good field is assured and it will be the best event of the Meeting.

It is not possible in any way to follow the handicapper's line of conduct as several ponies have been barred and furthermore the problem is somewhat complicated owing to the presence of three old timers brought from a higher standard. Gold Colt, Pride of Tsingtau and Racing Bay, all demoted last week, are to tip the scale at 108 lbs. and Laughing Buddha, a griffin of this year, is in the same boat. However, who annexed the Area Prata Handicap (First Section) at Macao last Sunday has incurred a penalty of 7 lbs. and he will have to shoulder 108 lbs. We have five ponies at the top of the ladder this being rather unusual.

It may not be known that Pride of Tsingtau, who made the trip to the Portuguese Colony last week did not face the start owing to an injury but he is O.K. now. Limestone and Billieum are making their first appearance of this season and I believe (Continued on Page 9.)

Little Chilean Player Beats Miss Scriven

Charming, study taken recently of Senorita Anita Lizana, the Chilean champion, who yesterday reached the semi-final of the British hardcourt Championship by beating Miss Scriven.

BETTY'S BIG EFFORT

PERRY V. AUSTIN FINAL AGAIN

London, Apr. 30.
Fred Perry has given very good evidence of his physical recovery this last week, the culminating test being reached to-day when he entered the final of the British Hardcourt Championships at Bournemouth after defeating A. C. Stedman, the New Zealander in three straight sets.

Perry, playing well within himself, won very comfortably 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. H. V. Austin, who qualified once again to meet Perry in this championship final, dropped a set to H. G. N. Lee. It was a hard fought second set of twelve games, but Austin won the other three with the loss of but four games. The scores were 6-1, 6-7, 6-2, 6-1.

There were plenty of upsets in the ladies' championship to-day. Biggest was straight set defeat of Miss Dorothy Round by Mrs. R. R. King, the ex-Wimbledon title holder winning but six games all told. Mrs. King took the first set at 6-4 and the second at 6-2.

CHILEAN CHAMPION SHINES

Miss Peggy Scriven, regarded by many critics as being England's foremost player at the present time, was brilliantly defeated by the diminutive Senorita Anita Lizana, the Chilean champion. The Senorita, who last year won five important English tennis titles, won the first set at 7-5 and conceded the second at 6-2. But she came back strongly in the final round to win it at 6-3.

Miss Betty Nuthall, striving to make a successful "come-back" this summer, put up a brave showing against the magnificent Mme. Henrotin of France. The French player easily captured the opening set at 6-2 but had to concede the second by the same score. A thrilling contest took place for the final set before Mme. Henrotin won at 7-5.

Miss Kathleen Stammers enjoyed an easy success against Miss Susan Noel, taking the first set at 6-2, and the second at 6-3.

The draw for the semi-finals is: Miss K. Stammers (G.B.) v. Mme. Henrotin (France). Sen. Anita Lizana (Chile) v. Mrs. R. R. King (G.B.). —Reuter.

NEW ZEALAND AND FORWARD PLAY

Oliver and Tindill On Formations

That the standard of Rugby in Great Britain had improved to a marked extent is given as one of the reasons for the All Blacks' comparative lack of success during their British tour in a book which has just been written by two of the team, C. J. Oliver and E. W. Tindill, states a Reuter message from Wellington. Other reasons given by Tindill were the lack of real scrummaging ability under New Zealand's new formation, injuries to players in key positions and the meeting of combined counties instead of single counties. Speaking of the All Blacks' forward play, Oliver says that they spent hours on end correcting the faults which were found to exist in the New Zealand scrum methods of to-day. The All Blacks were opposed by a 3-2-3 scrum on most occasions. It is true, he says, that the New Zealand 3-1-1 scrum turned out a success, but that was not till the latter part of the tour, after the scrummagers had learnt to pack low in front. "Of the two formations, I consider the 3-2-3 to be the better," he says.

R. Abbit's Article Next Tuesday

R. Abbit's article does not appear to-day as he is still collecting material for a review of the season's cricket. He is pleased to acknowledge receipt of information and statistics from the Royal Navy and Army, and is hoping that other clubs will send him in details of the season's performances, including batting and bowling averages during the next few days. R. Abbit will start his review of the season just finished on Thursday next. His article will appear in both editions of the Telegraph.

POPULAR SPORTSMAN WILL WED TO-DAY

Sidney Strange, one of the Colony's foremost sportsmen, notably in the football world, is being wedded this afternoon to Miss Eileen Eardley of Shanghai.

The ceremony will take place at St. Joseph's Church at 4.30. One of the best left backs the Colony has ever had, Mr. Strange has played Interport several times, and has also captained an Interport team in Shanghai. He has figured in many representative matches and has obtained most of the honours possible in local football. He still performs regularly for the Hongkong Football Club.

LISTER HARTLEY'S TWO VICTORIES

Defeats His Brother's Conqueror

Deal, Apr. 30.
In the fourth round of the English Amateur Golf Championship here to-day, H.G. Harrison of Middlesex defeated Rex Hartley at the 19th, while Lister Hartley beat J.G. Crawley 6 and 4. Lister Hartley also triumphed in the fifth round when he beat Harrison 3 and 2 to join Bentry, Cyril Tolley and Langley in the last eight. —Reuter.

With winter over, English sportsmen have resumed their training which this season is more intensive than usual in view of the coming Olympic Games. The picture shows a team of Oxford students getting off the mark.

LAST OF THE PAGANS

Adapted by CHARLES REED JONES from
the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture

Lillee, a Tofoan maiden, is in love with Mala, a Tofoan warrior. Tara, chief of the Tofoes, determines to get Lillee for himself. Mala and Lillee are among the Tofoes who visit Captain Buckley's schooner, which has dropped anchor in the lagoon. After a drunken row, the Tofoes return to the island. But Mala and five other warriors, tricked by Buckley and Tara, are held on the ship. Mala fights to escape, but he is overcome and locked in the hold. Returning to the island, Tara forces Lillee to marry him. Mala and the other captives are taken to Patua and forced to work in the phosphate quarries. When a coral tunnel collapses, Mala saves the life of Commandant Brannon, but Mala is pinned under a falling rock.

CHAPTER X

At the first crash of the collapsing tunnel, Reilly and Hastings mustered their men and drove them to the task of rescue. Kivi, fleet Tofoan, was dispatched for the doctor. The others wielded their picks and shovels with a frenzy to clear a path to the entombed men. Creeping and squirming his way along, Hastings wormed his way to a great, gaping hole in the pink coral. He called frantically to his Commandant within the choking, dust-laden cave. There was no answer.

Hastings worked his way back precariously to more solid ground. Plucking, cursing, praying, he exhorted the panting, sweating men to greater efforts. The doctor paced back and forth with nervous steps; two men lay, perhaps dead, perhaps dying, in this ghastly tomb at his side, yet he could do nothing for them.

When, at length, they cut a passage through the debris, Dr. Frawley led the way to the trapped men, Hastings and Reilly following close behind him.

"They're alive!" Frawley shouted, after a hasty examination.

"Quick! Get them out of here!"

Willing hands carried the men to the soft piles of mats that Frawley had prepared for them. Deftly, he worked over them. Presently, Brannon opened his eyes and looked about in amazement.

"He'll be all right now," Frawley announced. "A few bruises—that's all."

He turned his attention to Mala. He shook his head gravely.

"Bad!" he muttered to himself. "Here, Reilly! We'd better get him back to the office."

But Dr. Frawley's first fears of internal injuries proved groundless. Bruised and battered by the crushing weight of the coral, Mala recovered quickly under the physician's expert care. His pain eased after a day of intense agony, he rested comfortably on the soft kapok mattress, prepared for him in the doctor's office.

Commandant Brannon visited him on the second day.

"Hello, Mala! How do you feel?" he asked solicitously.

"Fine!" Mala lied. He smiled happily, pleased at the kindly interest of the white chief.

"A good man, Frawley," Brannon told the doctor. "He saved my life."

"Then, why the shackles?" Frawley asked. "His legs were chained together when we carried him here."

"He was hard to handle on the ship—tried to fight his way back to his woman."

The doctor nodded knowingly. "I understand—the same old story. Remarkable when you come to think of it—this resistance flourishing in this God-forsaken hell-hole."

"Well, I owe him something for my life, you know," Brannon replied. "He'll have his woman, I guess you'd better tell him, Doctor; I'm afraid it wouldn't do for me to get sentimental before a native."

He spun about and strode through the door.

With the news that Lillee was to join him, Mala looked forward with new hope to his life on Patua. With the permission of the Commandant, he worked late into the night, after his daily job at the quarries was done, to prepare a fare for his wife. And each evening, before he returned to this task of love, he sped eagerly down the dusty road to the office to ask the white chief for some news of Lillee.

"Patience, Mala!" Brannon would say. "She will soon be here!"

Two weeks later, Captain Buckley and Reilly, his Mate, stood in the centre of an excited group of tanae and vakines in the Tofoe village. Lillee, sad-eyed and dejected, stood disinterestedly at the fringe of the circle. The Mate, dressed in the language of the Tofoes, droned out his translation of the message from Commandant Brannon.

"A joyous scream rose shrilly as he read Lillee's name. Her arms flaying madly, she tore her way through the villagers to Robbin's side.

"Lillee!" she cried. "Lillee! I am Lillee!"

"Oh, yes, kid! Let's go!"

She sensed his meaning, and she stepped forward eagerly to follow him to the beach. Tara caught her by the arm and pulled her back roughly.

Lillee, frustrated again, screamed and fought frantically, but she was helpless in his strong hands.

"Lillee is Tara's wife!" he announced majestically. "Tara is the chief!"

"Now, what?" Buckley asked the Mate.

"He says he's the big-shot around here and we can't get away with his dame."

"So, what?"

"Well, if you take my advice, Captain, you'll lay off. A swell chance we'd have of ever pickin' up any more men for the quarries around here, if we try to cross him now."

"Right, you are, Mate! Tell the chief to forget it—we're his friends. I figured it was a dumb idea in the first place."

Robbins conveyed the message to Tara and placated him with a heavy string of bright green beads. Tara hung them about his neck and strutted proudly before his people. Lillee, thoroughly beaten in spirit, slunk away towards the chief's fare. Robbin, Mala's mother, stole after the despondent girl. She placed a consoling arm about the white chief's shoulders and whispered words of hope into his ear. Lillee smiled her thanks and hurried on with lighter steps.

When Buckley's schooner heeled over in the brisk breeze of the late afternoon and ran for the open sea, Lillee lay hidden in its dark hold.

Robbins discovered her the following morning. Too late to return her to the island, he planned to hold her until their next trip. Buckley accepted the wisdom of this course, and Lillee was locked in a small cabin below deck. She accepted her fate with smiling resignation, planning, somehow, to escape when the ship docked at Patua.

On the morning of the fifth day, the schooner rode into the harbour at Patua. Lillee watched through the small porthole. Soon, the ship was made fast to the jetty, and Buckley jumped over the side and started down the pier to the shore.

She lost no time now in carrying out the simple plan she had so carefully formulated through the long days and nights at sea. A thin sliver of light shone along the edge of the hatch above her head, and that faint ray of light was her ray of hope now.

She jumped to the cabin's rickety table with lithe grace and pulled her up to the hatch. Clinging desperately to a beam near it with one hand, she pushed up the hatch with the other. Cautiously, she squirmed her way through to the deck.

Unseen, she made her furtive way to the side of the ship. The jetty was behind her. She poised a moment on the rail, then dived gracefully into the sea. With sure, swift strokes, she struck out away from the pier. Her course lay parallel to the line of the shore; her goal was a sheltered cove that she had seen as the ship rode into the lagoon.

Lillee scrambled up the beach and began her eager search for Mala. As she hurried on, always bearing away from the pier and its threat of recapture, she espied a woman, busily weaving tapa cloth, before a fare. The wahine darted forward to greet her.

"I search for Mala, my tana," Lillee explained. "Does the woman know where the man called Mala can be found?"

"Mala will be there," she said, and she pointed gravely up the long, white, dusty road.

"Maruru, thank you!" Lillee cried gratefully, and she sped up the road.

When Lillee reached the quarry, the workmen, amazed at seeing a woman in their midst, dropped their tools and stared at her. Reilly, the overseer, ever alert to the stern discipline of Patua, reached for the whistle, dangling from his neck, to call the men to their tasks, but, as he regarded Lillee, it suddenly dawned upon him that she was Mala's woman.

"Mala!" he shouted. "Look! Here, come here!"

Mala turned to answer the summons, and his eyes fell upon Lillee. With a great shout of joy, he dropped his pick and ran to her.

"Lillee!" he cried. "Lillee!"

Mala and Lillee rushed to each other. As they met, he gathered her in his arms with one sweeping gesture. Lost in their ecstatic embrace, they clung together, unmindful of the men around them, deaf to their good-natured roars of laughter.

Reilly, too, was amused, and he was happy for Mala. Half-heartedly and amiably, he turned to the men with his inevitable cry, "Work! Work!"

He walked over to Mala and Lillee and patting the happy boy on the shoulder.

"You can go home now, Mala," he told him.

Mala needed no further urging. He swung Lillee into his arms and raced down the road towards his newly finished fare.

"Legitimate" King Of Scotland And Her Matchless Caballero

DEATH OF CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM

"HER MATCHLESS CABALLERO"

SCOTTISH TRIBUTE

The death last month in Scotland of Cunningham Graham, whom Andrew Long viewed as the legitimate King of Scotland, leaves that country definitely poorer. He was her matchless caballero, and though he loved to give modern Scotland the rough edge of his tongue, his countrymen were proud of one who so brilliantly revived in this commercial age the chivalric feelings of the past.

Probably outside the Clyde-side area, where he was known as a splendid fire-brand, he meant little to the working classes. His appeal was rather to the educated, who could favour his magnificent prose and place his picturesque valour in its true setting. Probably, too, his later self-dedication to Scottish nationalism withdrew him further from working-class politics, in which he first emerged as a fighting force.

The patriotic attitude he adopted during the war, when he spent eleven months in the Argentine buying horses for the Government, and his appearance as a Liberal candidate in the 1918 election, marked his severance from the wider politics of his prime.

Few official honours came to him from his native land. Scottish Nationalism and the P.E.N. Club delighted to honour him, but such a radio-active personality was not likely to meet official recognition. He belonged to the world rather than to Scotland, as his death in Buenos Aires fittingly symbolises.

INTELLECTUAL REBEL

WILD DAYS IN THE ARGENTINE

By SIR W. BEACH THOMAS.

Those who remember Cunningham Graham, however slightly in his flaming days, or, at any rate, in days when his essentially rebellious spirit was hot within him, feel that they will never know his like again. The world has changed too much to give such a character the old scope or lend zest to intellectual rebellion of his sort.

The first time I met him, he was bringing an article on a Spanish bull-fight to the offices of the old "Saturday Review." The sentiments of this article, as of others which succeeded it, were regarded as much naughtier than they would be to-day, but the quality of what he wrote was independent of times and fashions.

That article was resplendent with colour. It was full of life and vivid observation, and there probably does not exist in literature so incisive and perceptive an insight into the psychology of this brutal exhibition and its sadistic nature.

Bloodthirsty Dictator

The last time I saw Cunningham Graham he was looking up the careers of some South American leaders in a library in Madrid. One of the last books he wrote was an historical account of that bloodthirsty Paraguayan dictator under whom Paraguay lost so vast a percentage of its adult male population that the population threatened to disappear altogether.

He resembled some of the Elizabethan dramatists in his delight in such a subject. He is one of exactly two Britons whose names are familiar to the inhabitants of South America, whether they are in any sense literary or no. I do not know whether he has been done, the honour of having a railway station named after him or whether this honour was reserved exclusively for W. H. Hudson, but his memory will be preserved in the Argentine.

Among Rough Crowds

He died where he had most vitally lived. He ranged in the Argentine, and, like Hudson, knew Uruguay and some parts of Paraguay just as well. A great deal that he wrote might have been called like Hudson's early book, "The Purple Land."

The free rough life, the open plain, the life on horseback royally coloured all his writings, all his view of things. He was a marvellously racy talker, and to my memory his most purple patches were usually inspired by the contrast of the stuffy conventions of our island civilisation with the Victorian days with the ways and ways of thought of the Spaniard and the Moor in Europe, America, and Africa.

He ranged among very rough crowds 50 years ago. If you dismissed the man, or quarrelled with the man he would as likely as not hide in the maize crop and shoot you as you rode past—as happened to an acquaintance who saved his life by lying on the outside of his horse and galloping hell for leather. Even so, he was lit in a projecting part.

After such a life the conventions

No Crime To Kill Your Mother-in-Law

BLACK-CLAD rows of delegates quivered with laughter at the Assembly of the National Council of Evangelical Free Churches at Bristol this month.

Between chuckles they glanced incredulously at the agenda.

It read:—

Dr. T. Reaveley Glover, public orator of Cambridge.

Subject: Spiritual values of the Reformation.

"Scholars," Dr. Glover had observed to his scholarly audience, "are a little difficult to get on with."

"Some of them hate inaccuracy more than crime, yet, because inaccuracy is more dangerous than crime, it is no danger to the community if you kill your mother-in-law."

They gasped.

Ministers gasped at this shock-tactic logic.

"One of the miracles in literature is Authorised Version of the Bible," Dr. Glover went on.

"What," he asked this gathering of veteran committee-members, "is the miracle?"

"The miracle is a committee that wrote English—the only record, I believe, of a committee producing anything that approximated to English."

Assembly passed weighty resolutions on education and licensing reform; then filed out, still chuckling.

"Law in Dr. Glover's mother-in-law argument," Webster's Dictionary defines crime as a violation of public rights, but adds: "It may also involve a violation of the rights of an individual."

of an old settled country filled him with indignation, though his gift of rhetoric and literary expression kept the indignation bright and good humoured and throughout it all he was a patriot, especially a Scottish patriot.

His Spiritual Home

He was even at one time a Liberal Member of Parliament, but the rebel in him converted his Liberalism into Socialism of an advanced order, but politics were not his game.

Although emigrant Spain was perhaps his spiritual home, I used to think that his spiritual admiration went to the Moor and that whenever he wrote of the Moor he wrote with even more than his wonted gusto and distinction. His travels and adventures and freedom of criticism gave him an individual reputation that it is hard to parallel in the annals of our time.

WHAT A MAN SHOULD WEAR

A normal man's normal wardrobe, in addition to evening and formal wear, is:—

One blue serge suit (double breasted if you are reasonably slim and tall).

One grey flannel suit, striped or plain.

One (at least) lounge suit for town and office wear.

One tweed suit for country wear (plus four if you like them).

One (at least) pair of grey trousers.

One (at least) Double breasted pair of white if reasonably tall.

So says Mr. H. P. Price in "When Men Wear Muffs" (Dent, 5s.).

GROUP OF NUNS SUBSISTING ON 3d A DAY

Jerusalem, Apr. 30.

How a community of nuns is living in Palestine on an allowance of ten shillings a month for each nun—just over threepence a day—has been revealed by Edward Keith-Roach, District Commissioner for Northern Palestine.

The nuns, he told a meeting at the Scottish Home here, have approximately twopenny a day for bread, one poand of tea a month, and sixpence extra monthly for all other needs.

They are Russian nuns of the Greek Orthodox Church who have been cut off from their sources of revenue by Soviet authorities.

Before the war, said Keith-Roach, 20,000 to 30,000 Russian pilgrims came annually to the Holy Land, and the Russian Ecclesiastical Mission was prosperous. It was plunged into debt by the burden of caring for its people during the war, and since then has been cut off from all supplies from home.—United Press.

He was almost a prose Byron. But his physical almost as much as his intellectual vitality compelled a wide public in Britain, in Europe, and especially in South America to regard him as the most picturesque figure and writer of his day.

BRITISH TROOPS FIRE ON ITALIANS

THREE KNOWN SLAIN
Fugitives From Nairobi
BROKE FROM INTERNMENT

(Special To "Telegraph")

Nairobi, Apr. 30. Three of the thirty-one Italian native troops who escaped from the internment camp here, were shot down when they refused to surrender to a patrol of the King's African Rifles. Six others were drowned trying to cross a flooded river, sixteen were recaptured and six are still missing. The native sergeant in charge of the patrol which discovered the fugitives ordered them to halt in Arabie and Kikwili, warning them that he would open fire if they failed to comply with the command. Disregarding the order and the threat, the fugitives scattered, some plunging into the river and others taking to the bush. — Reuter Special.

AFRICAN DEFENCE
Capetown, Apr. 30. Mr. O. Pirow, the South African Minister for Defence, who recently announced the first steps towards modernisation of the defences of South Africa and the probability of a common system of protection on the part of all British African states south of the Sudan, is leaving for England on May 22. He goes on the invitation of the British Government to discuss matters affecting communications and defence in South Africa. — Reuter's Bulletin Service.

GERMAN CONSULAR RECEPTION
HERR GIPPERICH URGES GOODWILL
GOVERNOR'S SPEECH

British and foreign residents combined in felicitations to the German community this morning by accepting the invitation of Herr H. Gipperich, Consul General, to a reception marking the German National Day, held at the rooms of the Deutscher Klub. His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, was amongst the large gathering present, and Herr Gipperich, in a moving speech, reiterated the common interests between England and his country and hoped that it would be broadened to embrace the whole of the world. He proposed the health of King Edward VIII to which His Excellency replied with a toast to the German people.

CONSUL'S SPEECH
Herr Gipperich said: It is my privilege to-day and my very pleasant duty to extend a very hearty welcome to all our foreign friends and to thank you all, both on my behalf and on behalf of the German community of Hongkong, for the honour you have done us by coming here to-day to join us in the celebrations of our National Day. To-day is a reminder to us that the achievement of work for all is considered to be of paramount importance in Germany. We are not a rich country, except in population and the working capacity of our people, and it naturally falls, therefore, upon the Government to see that the idle hands—idle whether by choice or necessity—are provided with as much work as possible. It will be a happy day for our Government and for our people when no able-bodied man in the country will be without work. Great strides have been made in the suppression of unemployment under our present leadership during the past three years but the economic and political confusion that has spread to all parts of the world has proved to be a serious impediment. Our Government and every responsible person in the world is fully (Continued on Page 5)

Treachery Suspected In Ethiopian Lines

KEY POSITION EVACUATED

SUPPORT TROOPS FAIL TO ARRIVE

ITALIAN PLANES TAKE TOLL OF FUGITIVES

Addis Ababa, April 30. Grave fears of treachery in the Ethiopian lines have been aroused by the capture of Mount Tarmadur on the northern front, near Debra Brehan, 70 miles from Addis Ababa. This was a key position, commanding two roads from Dessie to Addis Ababa.

It appears 1,000 reinforcements were sent to stem the Italian advance on the capital at this point, but they failed to arrive as they received no supplies.

In consequence, the garrison of the stronghold at Tarmadur, held by only 330 men under the Swedish Captain Tamm, was forced to retire in the face of the overwhelming odds against it. — Reuter Special.

Rome, Apr. 30. Italian machine-guns, mounted on lorries, and a fleet of thirty bombing planes, each carrying a ton of explosives, are taking a heavy toll of Ethiopian troops fleeing up the Jijiga road following the capture of the so-called "Hindenburg Line" at Sasa Baneh by General Rodolfo Graziani's advancing army.

The planes, after dropping their bombs, return to their base at Gorrabel for more, and continue their hunting.

Little opposition to the Italian advance is now foreseen until the invading columns reach a line about ten miles in front of Jijiga and Harar; and the Jijiga-Berbera road, 80 miles beyond Daggahbur.

It is believed that Ras Nasibou, whose forces are engaging the Italians in this sector, has strongly fortified this line of defence. Loss of the positions will mean the cutting of the Ethiopian communications with Berbera, from which point they have been receiving supplies of munitions and other stores. — Reuter.

Emperor Optimistic

Paris, Apr. 30. The mystery of the whereabouts of the Emperor of Ethiopia, missing since the defeat of his army on the northern front, allegedly as a result of repeated Italian gas attacks upon his unprotected soldiery, is now solved, according to a message received from Addis Ababa.

This message states that the Emperor has arrived at his capital. He rode into the city this afternoon, and was in good spirits. The Negus declared the Italian advance was far from entailing a decisive Italian victory. — Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Dum-Dum Bullets

The Italian Consul-General in Hongkong informs us that the Italian Government has sent to the League of Nations and to the International Committee of the Red Cross the following Note: H. Ex. Marshall Badoglio informs that during the battle of Jijiga during the days between the 14th and the 17th of April and brought to Mogadiscio, 120 men had been hit by dum-dum bullets.

The government of Somaliland informs that among the 100 soldiers wounded in the battle of Gimgob during the days between the 14th and the 17th of April and brought to Mogadiscio, 120 men had been hit by dum-dum bullets.

FIRST PERSONAL AIDE-DE-CAMP

London, Apr. 30. His Majesty the King has appointed his great-uncle the Duke of Connaught, to be his first personal aide-de-camp. The appointment takes effect tomorrow, which is the Duke's eighty-sixth birthday. — Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Manchukuoan Trade Pact With Berlin

GERMANY MAKING SOVIET TREATY

QUESTIONS OF PAYMENTS

Berlin, Apr. 30. Germany has signed a trade agreement with Manchukuo. The commercial pact is designed to facilitate and increase the mutual trade of the two countries and was signed by the German Foreign Exchange Control office and a corresponding office of the Manchukuo today. The agreement is ascribed to efforts of the German Economic Mission in the Far East.

It is further announced that Germany has reached a similar agreement with Russia. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of Economic Affairs, has worked an arrangement with the head of the Soviet commercial commissariat for the regulation of mutual trade and this year's payments. — Reuter.

CREDITS FOR GERMANY?

USED FOR ARMAMENTS CHAMBERLAIN TOLD

London, Apr. 30. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, was asked in the House of Commons to-day whether he was aware that several banks had granted German borrowers short term credits, and whether, in view of the fact that such credit transactions procured additional foreign exchange resources enabling the German Government to increase its raw material imports for armaments, he would discourage granting of new credits to German borrowers. He replied he was not aware of any such credits. He could, however, assure the House the question had not been overlooked and was ever present in the minds of the appropriate authorities. He had no reason to believe the banking community as a whole was acting other than in accordance with the general feeling of the House. — British Wireless.

SHIP INSURANCE

London, Apr. 30. The Board of Trade has appointed a committee to enquire into the present system of insuring hulls of vessels, in the light of recent judicial comments on the insured values of ships for total loss. — British Wireless.

TRADE BARRIERS LEAD TO WAR

BRITAIN AND U.S. SEEK REMEDY

SIGNIFICANCE SEEN IN STATEMENTS

London, May 1. Significance is attached to the coincidence of the official British and American advocacy of the removal of trade restrictions.

Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, addressing the Chamber of Commerce convention in Washington, declared excessive trade barriers were a major factor in the growing danger of world war and exhorted business men to give close attention to the world's economic distress.

In London, Mr. Walter Runciman, the President of the Board of Trade, speaking to the British Chambers of Commerce leaders, said the American Ambassador, Mr. Robert Bingham, who was present, represented a Government which wished to see a much freer flow of international trade, and insofar as the United States followed that ambition, Great Britain would be ready to co-operate. — Reuter.

DEVALUING U.S. MONEY FURTHER?

PITTMAN DECLINES TO COMMENT

TENDENCY TO INFLATION

Washington, Apr. 30. Senator Key Pittman, who is in close touch with the Treasury on money matters, said to-day he had not been informed by that Department regarding the possibility of a further devaluation of the dollar in view of the rumoured intention of France to abandon the gold standard. He did not want to discuss the situation, he said.

Legislation suggested by Senator Thomas, he said, would give the President power to forty per cent. of its original gold content. Senator Thomas also proposes to make the stabilisation fund permanent with a view to protecting the dollar should the franc, or other gold currencies, devalue. — Reuter.

GIFT MAY BRING NEW BLESSING TO MANKIND

London, May 1. Sir Herbert Austin's gift of £250,000 to Cambridge University, to be utilised in scientific research, is expected to result in the early construction of a million-volt laboratory. In this place of miracles it is proposed to conduct atom-bombarding experiments. Lord Rutherford declares that efforts in this direction may ultimately lead science to perfect transmutation of matter. Sir Ambrose Fleming believes such a laboratory presents supreme opportunities, and might result, among other things, in the artificial production of radium. — Reuter.

WARNING AGAINST RADICALS

RED MENACE IN AMERICA

NAVAL CHIEFS TESTIFY

Washington, Apr. 30. The menace of Communism in the United States has been stressed by distinguished American naval authorities before the House Appropriations sub-Committee, according to a report published to-day.

Captain Puleston, Chief of Naval Intelligence, declared that "subversive activities are threatening the security of the Fleet." Rear-Admiral Taussig, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations, declared that members of the Third International were most active in the United States furthering the plan of world revolution, which included the overthrow of the present form of the United States Government. — Reuter.

BRITISH NOTE TO GERMANY

CABINET STUDY INCOMPLETE

London, Apr. 30.

Despite a meeting at an early hour to-day, the British Cabinet did not conclude its examination of the questionnaire to Germany, which the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, proposes to submit to Herr Adolf Hitler, the German Chancellor, with a view to clarifying certain points of the German peace formula and future policy in Europe.

A further meeting of the Cabinet will be necessary, it is learned. The questionnaire will be communicated to Germany early next week, instead of to-morrow or Saturday, as was at first expected. It will be delivered through the ordinary diplomatic channels. — Reuter.

ACTING FOR SIGNATORIES

London, Apr. 30.

When the Locarno signatories, other than Germany, ended their last conversations in Geneva on April 10 it was agreed the British representatives should get into touch with the German Government to obtain elucidation of a certain number of points in the German memorandum of March 31. The importance of this stage in negotiations, following the events of March 7, is fully understood in London, and the British Government is giving most careful consideration to the questions it will address to Herr Hitler's Government.

Although the Government is acting at the request of other powers which adhere to the Locarno Treaty the form and matter of approach to Berlin was left entirely to its discretion.

There was a special meeting of the Cabinet this morning which is believed to have been concerned with the communication, which it is now anticipated will be despatched through diplomatic channels sometime early next week. — British Wireless.

Mechanisation Plans For Maginot Line

FRENCH CALL FOR MOTORISED ARMY

NEW VOLUNTEER FORCE LIKELY

Paris, April 20.

ONE of the first measures which the new French Parliament will discuss when it meets in May will, it is believed, be a law for the enrolment of a body of volunteers serving for five years, and entrusted with the formation of highly developed mechanised units of tanks, motorised artillery, and infantry.

Writing in the Revue Hebdomadaire, a military critic declares that the army is not properly equipped to man the Maginot Line of fortifications on the eastern frontier.

He points out that not only have the forts to be manned, but the gaps between the forts must be filled with field works occupied with infantry and artillery.

The Echo de Paris urges that steps should be taken to build up an army corps of professional soldiers capable of manoeuvring with great rapidity and therefore able to deal with the situation that would arise should the Maginot Line be pierced.

MYSTERY GUN

A mystery gun capable of firing an 8 inch shell more than 30 miles is believed to have been produced recently by German technical experts, according to the Paris Excelsior.

French authorities, it is stated, believe that the German divisional artillery will soon be equipped with guns of a range more than 10 miles in excess of the French divisions.

The German infantry are stated to be equipped with:

Air-cooled machine-guns capable of 100 rounds a minute and of penetrating 1-in-thick armoured plate at 1,000 yards.

Anti-tank guns, firing 15 shells a minute, which can be taken over every type of ground.

The construction of an enormous mound 50 yards long at the great Krupp munition works, is believed to indicate that guns of 22in. are to be produced and that several guns of 15in. calibre have been made.

"Tich" Proctor is the new Royal Marines bugler on H.M.S. Sussex, now at Alexandria. Height 4 ft. 4in., weight 75lb. Here he is inspecting the guns... with assistance.

Stiffer Test for King's Cup Pilots

"OLD CROCKS" WILL HAVE LITTLE CHANCE

REGULATIONS governing the King's Cup Air Race, to be flown from Hatfield airbase, Herts, on July 10 and 11, have now been completed.

No pilot will be allowed to take part who has not gathered a minimum of 100 hours' solo flying experience before the race.

On Friday, July 10, there will be an eliminating contest covering this course of 612 miles:

Hatfield-Norwich: 91 miles.

Turning point.

Norwich-Nottingham: 103 miles.

Turning point.

Nottingham-Bristol: 121 miles.

Control.

Bristol-High Post (Wilt): 40 miles.

Turning point.

High Post-Shoreham: 69 miles.

Control.

Shoreham-Coventry: 120 miles.

Turning point.

Coventry-Hatfield: 68 miles.

Control at end of first circuit.

Competitors have to complete two circuits of this course and will thus be flying over 1,200 miles in the one day.

AVOIDING THE SEA

The course has been selected to avoid crossing the Pennines or the sea, since it is considered inadvisable to encourage flights in single-engined machines racing "full out" over big stretches of water.

This was tried last year when one competitor was forced to come down in the Irish Sea through engine trouble. Fortunately, a steamer was at hand to save him.

There are three classes of entrants for this eliminating contest.

Class A will comprise the light airplanes whose horse power is under 150.

Class B will consist of single-engined machines of greater horse power.

MULTI-ENGINE 'PLANES

There is also a class with multi-engined machines with no restriction on horse power. The latter machines can also be entered in either class A or B.

On July 11 the final will be flown on a course round Hatfield consisting, like last year, of several laps of about 60 miles each to make up a total race of 350 miles.

GOLF BALL ON A MACKINTOSH

COTTON IN A DISPUTE

Fleet, Apr. 20.

Henry Cotton, British Open Champion two years ago, and one of the leading figures in the world of golf, was involved in a curious incident, which caused controversy, in the £2,000 tournament on the Bramshot course here today.

At the twelfth hole Cotton's tee shot came to rest on a spectator's mackintosh, which was lying on the ground near the green. Cotton asked the spectator to remove the garment, which he did, at the same time picking up the ball and replacing it. Cotton then played the shot.

The question arose: Had Cotton incurred a penalty?

The rule on the point states clearly that a ball lying on clothes may be dropped or placed by the player not nearer the hole, without penalty.

By allowing the spectator to perform the act Cotton, strictly speaking, committed a breach of the rules, involving a penalty of two strokes. From the point of view of equity the committee, quite rightly I think, decided that Cotton had incurred no penalty.

Cotton's round of 75, which put him out of the running, was full of incidents. On more than one occasion, in obvious annoyance at missing a short putt, he banged the ball on the green.

"I took 30 putts, missing seven of eight and less. It is incredible," said Cotton.

COUNT McCORMACK IS RETIRING—

What Can I Do With Him? Sighs Wife

JOHN, COUNT McCORMACK, has announced his coming retirement. The golden harvest has been reaped.

Nearly thirty years ago he came to London, a handsome Irish boy with nothing but a voice of the finest texture and a shrewd brain to serve him.

For a while he earned shillings. Then he sang at Covent Garden. The purity of that voice—for he was no actor—brought the house to its feet.

From that day—October 15, 1907—until to-day, he has walked knee deep amid an ever ripening harvest. No earthly voice has ever earned tribute so rich. Millions have been paid to hear the voice of the peasant boy.

He went to America with Caruso. He conquered New York in a night.

His wealth grew to be enormous. No singer has ever amassed a fortune so great. Honours fell upon him. The Legion of Honour. The Pope conferred on him the title of Papal Count.

ADOPTED FAMILY

He made £100,000 with one film. He bought the most beautiful home in California.

When a relative was drowned, leaving a widow and seven children, he adopted them all. He has two children, but his adopted family is enormous.

There will be scenes of emotion when he sings at the Albert Hall on Sunday.

I spoke to his tiny wife recently, writes a correspondent. She smiled at me in a puzzled way. "What is one to do with a man of his awful energy, still young, when he retires?"

"With all his work during these years he still has had vitality enough to exhaust us all. What will it be like now, in retirement? He will be too much for me to manage."

The clear golden voice of the harvester rang across the room. "And is this the thanks I get? When I did it all for the love of ye?"

He grabbed my arm. "She'll perfect a technique of gentle bullying as effective as that she has used during the last thirty years."

I left them as I first saw them years ago—like children having a "let's pretend" squabble.

"Hover Fly" Flight

INVENTOR'S CLAIMS FOR HELICOPTER

A direct-lift flying machine which is to have the same flight powers as the "hover fly" is being built in London.

Everybody has seen that curious insect which, poised motionless in the air, suddenly darts forward, or with equal celerity darts astern. Its movements are so swift as to defy analysis.

Discussing his invention with Mr. N. Pemberton Billing, the designer of what I have called the "hover-fly" machine, but which he names the "durotin," I learned that he had not been inspired by observation of the insect, writes a correspondent.

The machine includes remarkable mechanical innovations, and an application of centrifugal force. That force is applied in the Auto-giro, an established type used for many purposes, but in the "durotin" it is adapted in a different way.

Vortical Ascent

The machine is not an autogiro, for the rotating members—there are two, rotating in opposite directions—are driven by the engine.

"The 'durotin' has no ordinary airscrew, but depends for all movements upon the horizontally-rotating built-up rotors, the six biplane blades of which deflect automatically, and under control.

The pilot's controls are the normal joystick, or wheel, foot pedals for rudder, motor controls, and a speed lever.

If the inventor's claims are justified in tests this machine should be the most completely automatic flying machine ever designed.

Without a pilot it could be started up. It would ascend vertically, and at a pre-governed height remain hovering until the fuel was exhausted, when it would descend, and heading into wind, land safely.

Mr. Billing was a designer of aeroplanes before the war, and established the Supermarine name and works. He learned to fly in a day under the terms of a wager.

Travel where you will, you'll find this veteran whisky, ripe in age, rich in flavour and bouquet. These fine and special qualities have made Johnnie Walker a whisky of international fame.

RE-ALLOCATION OF MANDATES?

Following the frequent categorical denials that Britain has any intention of transferring to other nations any of the mandated territories which she holds, some confusion may be created by the suggestion now put forward at Home that the colonial problem might be settled by the Powers at present operating mandates surrendering them for re-allocation. It is suggested that if this method were followed, Germany and Italy might secure a share of such territories. It was only a few days ago that Mr. Baldwin declared, once again, in the House of Commons that the British Government had not considered and was not considering, the transfer of any of those mandated areas. A point which must be kept in mind in this connection, however, is that it is one thing for Britain to contemplate unilateral action in this matter, and quite another for her to consider the possibility of some re-adjustment in common with other nations holding mandates. Indeed, it would seem that this latter contingency is not altogether ruled out, for responsible British statesmen have laid stress on the point that there could not be any question of Britain giving up her mandates irrespective of the policy of other nations in this matter. Sight must not be lost, either, of the statement by Mr. Baldwin that the question of the transfer of a mandate, if it were to be contemplated, would be subject to procedure of an elaborate nature, and one that could not be subject to any sudden or hasty decision. So far as Britain is concerned, however, Mr. Baldwin has made it clear that there is no intention of the Government itself raising the question, although he added that if the matter of the future status of these territories is raised, the Government will not commit itself to any settlement without giving the House of Commons the fullest opportunity for discussion. Reading between the lines, it would seem that the position is that, whilst not anxious that the matter should be pressed on its attention at the moment, the British Government is prepared to listen to any practicable suggestions which would embrace all nations administering mandates. The exact legal position, however, is by no means clear. Above all, it is obvious that no changes could be contemplated which did not take account of the feelings of the peoples of the territories concerned.

STOP this FOOLING, NOW!By OLIVER BALDWIN

the Prime Minister's gifted Socialist son who in this article expresses in forthright fashion his personal views on the European situation.

The Treaty MustBe Torn Up

YEAR after year the French have pushed the logic of the Versailles Treaty towards its inevitable results; and never are the French more logical than when starting off from a false premise. That false premise is the Treaty of Versailles itself, and for the peace of the world it is imperative that that treaty be torn up by the signatory nations themselves and a new treaty made between free peoples determined to live their lives in peace.

What Will BeThe Result?

WE are now in the illogical and fatuous position of having to ask an outlawed Italy to help France and England keep a sovereign people in subjection in their own country. And if Germany refuses to be so dragooned; and if we do send troops into their land; and if there should be but one little frontier incident—what will be the result? It will be war... a real bitter, grinding war, followed by international revolution.

That is whither the Governments of France and England are heading, and that is why it is time we stopped this nonsense at once.

The French are on the verge of their general elections. Those elections are going to the Left, when finance will see to it that the franc will fall as a result. In what position will France be to face a champing Germany then?

NOTES OF THE DAYPLASTICS

There has been a steady growth in the British plastics industry in recent years. Although no production statistics are available prior to 1930, the export figures provide sufficient evidence of the progress of the industry. In 1930 the amount of plastics exported totalled 2,516 cwt., of a total value of £12,358. In 1934 the figure had risen to 26,296 cwt., of a value of £124,043. The history of the industry dates back to 1864 when celluloid began to be manufactured; since then, and especially within the last ten years, a number of new plastic substances have been discovered based either on synthetic resins or cellulose derivatives.

The discovery of a certain new transparent plastic material by Imperial Chemical Industries Limited has aroused considerable interest both in Great Britain and abroad. The material is produced in two different forms; one bearing the name of "Perspex", which is a cast form in sheets and rods, the other being called "Diakon", which is prepared as transparent or coloured granules or powders for use in injection or compression moulding. The demand for "Perspex" particularly in the aircraft industry, where it is chiefly used for windows and windcreens, has been so great that the firm's entire output will be absorbed for some time to come. Both substances possess the property of extreme transparency to visible and ultra-violet light, and are almost unbreakable. "Diakon" particularly may be used for a great variety of purposes, owing to the fact that it can be speedily moulded and resists chemical action. The two forms of material are said to represent one of the most important contributions that science has recently made to the products of a wide range of manufacturing trades.

pressed on its attention at the moment, the British Government is prepared to listen to any practicable suggestions which would embrace all nations administering mandates. The exact legal position, however, is by no means clear. Above all, it is obvious that no changes could be contemplated which did not take account of the feelings of the peoples of the territories concerned.

Then there are exercises for the nervous system. The highly strung, jumpy person need not do any vigorous movements, but a concentration for a few moments on balance, &c., will work wonders. I would like to convince those interested in the subject that by doing their daily dozen regularly, they will feel an improvement after the first month. I have proved that before going to bed is the best and most convenient time to do them, when there are no clothes to restrict movement. I have worked out a table of exercises which covers every muscle and joint in the body, and takes only five minutes but don't have a heavy supper at, say, ten o'clock, and start exercises at 10.15; give your digestive organs a chance to do a bit of work in between. Personally, I don't give a hoot for text-book methods, but work out my own exercises according to the defects in the person asking advice. I would like to quote just a few cases to convince anyone who may have similar defects in the body.

Find The Cause OfEconomic Ills

BUT that will not be enough. Added to the injustices of that treaty are the economic injustices of the world, the tariff barriers, the gambling and speculation, and the vast canker of unemployment.

There must be a real economic conference allied to the new peace proposals, wherein the nations can earnestly try to find the cause of their economic ills and thereby set Europe on its true road to internal and external peace.

We Must BreakWith The Past

WAR is a frequent and logical consequence of unsatisfactory trade and economic misery, and if peace is to be assured, our economic ills must be conquered, and at the same time as we sign a Peace Treaty of Free Peoples.

Let the meeting-place be Berlin. Let us go there to make genuine pledges for peace and sanity. Let us bury the Treaty of Versailles and the aggressive Treaty of Locarno once and for all.

Treaty of Versailles and the aggressive Treaty of Locarno once and for all.

It is all very well for our rulers to imagine that they can get us safely out of this present mess, but it will be impossible without a completely new spirit and a definite break with the past.

Great BritainAlone Can Do It

IS the National Government of Great Britain strong enough to do this?—for it will have to be done by somebody, for the simple reason that the people of Great Britain will not stand for a war against Germany or anyone else.

French fear and German sense of inferiority are impossible bed-fellows. Great Britain alone can calm the one and cure the other. Let our Foreign Secretary inform the world of what we all know at heart—that the Versailles Treaty is a bad treaty, and that, from the end of this week, it shall cease to exist.

Now... Before ItIs Too Late

GIVE us a human treaty of mutual economic aid; give us a treaty of international friendship, a treaty that shall mark a new era of good will and sanity.

Tear up the Versailles Treaty now before it is too late, or those that are sent out to war will return with hatred in their heart, not for the enemy but for those who denied them their sacred right to live and labour for the good of the world.

PHYSICAL TRAINING EXERCISESBy a PHYSICAL TRAINING INSTRUCTOR*Useful To All

It makes no difference what the defect or age is, special exercises can be given to improve one physically, to improve the digestion, nerves, spinal curvature, stiff joints, tight muscles; narrow chest; bad breathing; or any of the 101 ailments the body is subject to. Fifty per cent. of those people who run to their doctor could keep the fee in their pocket by doing that five minutes daily.

I read, the other day in an article on physical training that there is a danger for a third business man in doing physical exercises for fear of overstrain. I answer that by saying that the business man will not be tired physically, if he does them regularly, and they will certainly help to lessen his mental strain. That is what they are meant to do, by a co-ordination of the mind and body.

It is only commonsense that a combination of well-balanced brain and brawn will harmonise better than a strong brain and a soft body. To the tired business man I would say start on the five minutes a day, and you will feel a different man by the end of your Sunday's golf (after the first month), but you must put all you've got into that five minutes.

Rugby players, who at this time of the season, when accidents and pulled muscles occur more frequently through overtraining and staleness, need not pay a doctor's fee to have his fingers dug into your muscles, and after having given you a sweat (this from personal experience) to be advised to get massage (another fee), but go to a good football trainer or physical training instructor. Don't ask to see their diplomas (Sir Herbert Barker didn't have any). They both know their anatomy and will put you right if it is anything less than a fracture.

Fit As Fiddles

Many of these accidents are caused through want of loosening exercises after strenuous play. I am daily treating past and present Rugby internationalists for these sorts of things, and they all come back and tell me the results following advice given, and to get little alterations in exercises, as physical training is progressive and requires to be strengthened from time to time.

As my job is a whole-time one as a physical training instructor, what I do for others apart from that is just my hobby, and I have therefore never accepted a fee, but just to see those whom I have advised, come and say they are fit as fiddles again, is payment indeed.

A schoolboy of 16 years of age was sent to me by his doctor, with a note which read, "This boy has a weak heart, please take him into your invalids' class." He must not be allowed to run, or do exercises. I sent the boy back and asked for a free hand, as the boy would have been wasting his time watching the others work. I was then told to carry on as I thought fit, and by simple easy exercises, the muscles round the heart were strengthened, then extended to other parts of the body and limbs. Two years later, the same boy won his heat in a mile race on one day, and ran second in the final open to his school on the next. He also passed a swimming test of 50 yards.

A Rugby Recovery

Another boy, perhaps a year older, came to me and asked if I could help him, he had been injured in a Rugby game. The injury was supposed to be in the spine as he could not bend his body forward, and he had been told that his Rugby days were almost certainly finished. I massaged the damaged part for a week until the muscles were loosened, then started physical exercises which, combined with a little daily massage, I continued for a few months. He played all his last season in his school at XV, went on to play regularly for his college, and gained a running Blue.

Just one more cure of an apparently permanent defect, obtained by nothing but purely physical training exercises. This was a boy whose one shoulder was four inches lower than the other, and who was absolutely square in six months.

There is nothing wonderful in the cure of any of these cases, but I am trying to prove what can be done by having a go, not only to the defective, but to the fit who would keep fit by sacrificing five minutes out of every 24 hours.

In my own case I had a rough time for two years in the Boer War, and was gassed in the Great War, but thanks to physical training in my 56th year I can lead a gym. squad over the horse, parallel bars, or obstacle race, run a fast 100 or 200 yards, and do any odd contortion, but I am firmly convinced that had it not been for doing my daily dozen regularly I should have been a wreck long ago.

Girl-Wife Betrays Spy

Sees Husband Banished

"I Want To Forget"

Metz, Franco.

German Frontier.

April 20.

A LOVELY girl-wife known as "The Star of Morocco"—torn between love for her husband, whom she knew to be a spy, and loyalty to her country, finally betraying him to the military authorities and seeing him sentenced to imprisonment and banishment.

Such was the dramatic story unfolded in the Sessional Court here when Charles Criddle, adjutant in the French Army, attached to the 402nd Anti-Aircraft Regiment, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, ten years' banishment, with a fine of £200.

He was also deprived of all military and civil rights.

Professor Altmeyer, a German agent to whom Criddle was said to have sold military secrets at Saarbrücken, received similar sentences and was fined £100.

Madame Criddle, who is only 20 and who was also accused of espionage, was acquitted because she helped to bring her husband and Altmeyer before the court.

She gained the title of "Star of Morocco" in a beauty competition in Rabat, where she lived with her parents.

"A NEW LIFE"

A young officer attached to the 402nd Anti-Aircraft Regiment, whose name was not disclosed, told how he was commissioned to watch Criddle and how he made love to Mme. Criddle to gain her confidence.

After they had known each other for some months, Criddle intercepted a letter which her husband had written to Altmeyer. The letter was altered and sent in the form of an invitation to the German agent to cross the frontier.

Altmeyer, thinking Criddle had important information for him, travelled to Metz, and was immediately arrested. Criddle was arrested later.

Mme. Criddle said after the trial: "Now it is all over I am going to start life afresh. It was a dreadful decision to have to make—and even now I am not sure I was right in helping to betray my own husband... I am going to try to forget it all."

VETERANS OF FUTURE WARS ORGANIZED

Princeton, N.J., Apr. 20.

The "Veterans of Future Wars," organized by satirical students at Princeton University, has issued a manifesto demanding immediate payment of a $1,000 bonus to potential soldiers.

They also urged formation of a companion organization, "The Association of Gold Star Mothers," and announced a chapter was already being organized at Vassar college for women. Membership in this organization is open to all mothers and prospective mothers.

The joke is spreading, it appears. A dozen universities have requested chapters of the organization, and hundreds of students are joining. Twenty-five cents is collected from every member when he joins.

DORADO LEAVES

The Imperial Airways mail plane Dorado left Hongkong for Penang at 11 a.m. to-day. There were two passengers aboard, Mr. See Seang-hwat and Mr. Lin Beng-hong.

679 PEOPLE LOSE HOMES

Haverfordwest, April 20.

A MROTH, a pretty little Pembrokeshire village of 679 people, is to be abandoned to the mercy of the sea. Its doom was pronounced by the county council roads committee at Haverfordwest last month.

The villagers must lose their homes. According to the clerk of the council (Mr. R. A. Wheatley), replying to a councillor, they can claim no compensation.

The Pembrokeshire County Council has already spent several thousand pounds on sea defence there to protect the county road which runs through the village and acts as a breakwater.

The clerk explained that their consulting engineers had told them that about £30,000 was necessary to provide adequate defence works for the village.

"WASTE OF MONEY"

The county council sub-committee recommended that no further expenditure should be incurred on the roads beyond surface maintenance.

The chairman, Mr. V. J. G. Johns: "We are told it will be an absolute waste of money. Our new road is almost washed away."

"We were told many years ago," declared Alderman B. G. Llewellyn, of Fishguard, "that it would be better to move the whole village than go to the expense of providing defence works."

Major R. C. Barclay, of Manorbier: "When the road goes the village will go with it."

The clerk: "If it goes our liability has gone."

Alberta Fails To Pay Debts

£5-A MONTH CABINET'S £640,000 DEFAULT

FIRST IN CANADA'S HISTORY

Calgary (Alberta), Apr. 15.

The Social Credit Government of the Province of Alberta has defaulted on the redemption of £640,000 worth of bonds due to-day. They were a gold debenture issue of 1921.

Mr. Aberhart, the Premier, in addition to being unable to fulfil his election promises of monthly dividends of £5 for everybody, has been buffeted by a storm of unrest following higher taxation.

He has refused to submit to Federal regulations to protect further advances to the province. Default appeared, therefore, to be his only course.

This is the first time that any Canadian Government has failed to redeem its bonds. Inquiries have failed to reveal where the bonds are held. The entire 15-year issue was "payable to bearer." Therefore no records exist of the present owners.

It is known, however, that practically the entire issue, on which payment has not been made, was sold to Canadians in 1921.

Of Alberta's debt of, roughly, £32,000,000 more than 50 per cent. is held in the United States, 15 per cent. in Great Britain, and the remainder in Canada.

Many municipalities have Alberta bonds in their sinking funds account.

ITALY BUYING STERLING

SWISS FRANC GOES INTO DECLINE

Amsterdam, Apr. 30.

Well-informed bankers here attribute the sudden weakness of the Swiss franc to nervousness at the leftist trend of the French elections.

Italy, it is known, is therefore converting her Swiss balances into sterling, for the British pound is regarded as safer.

PONIES TO RACE UNDER THEIR NEW CLASSIFICATION

ROYAL SCOT'S PENALTY FOR CLEVER WIN

BIGGEST PROBLEM TO-MORROW IS TO SECURE THE DOUBLE

ABLE AMAZON STILL ON SICK LIST.

(By "Captain Foster")

After the Easter Meeting, several Australian and China Ponies were promoted and demoted by the Classification Sub-Committee and the list was published in this paper sometime last week. The inclusion of Honeycomb Eve and Royal Scot in the "A" standard was a foregone conclusion, owing to the smart display by Honeycomb Eve in the Morrison Hill "B" class Handicap run on Easter Monday, and it will be recalled that her time of the race was only three-fifths of a second outside of the track record held by Apollo. It may seem a bit hard on Royal Scot that she should be promoted to "A" class in view of the fact that she had not contested in a "B" class event, but it is obvious that the classification sub-committee were not taking any chances after her clever win in the St. George's Plate, when she covered the champion course in 2.35.1/5.

Both Honeycomb Eve and Royal Scot have been entered for the main event, the Mount Parker Handicap "A" Class over 1 1/4 miles to be staged to-morrow and no doubt the running of these two mares will be watched with much interest. There are eight other events on the card and spotting the winners in the Daily Double Event will be a problem. Punters have a beautiful "menu" of 22 competitors from whom to select the second leg of the double, and the adjustment of poundage by the weight assigner has undoubtedly put some "pep" in the event which is the Tai-Mo-Shan Handicap for "B" class ponies over six furlongs.

It is learned with regret that Able Amazon is "dicky" her last appearance being when she gave Strathroy a beating in the Australian Ponies Champions at the Annual Race Meeting. This mare is causing some anxiety to her connections and if she does not face the starter at the Fifth Extra Meeting to be held on May 10, Able Amazon will be debarré from the Queensland Autumn Champions to be run at the end of the fall.

It may not be known that the heavy state of the going at the Annual Carnival was responsible for many casualties among the Australian Ponies, and Yo Ho, the winner of the Rooty Hill Derby Holiday Eve, who was the Sydney Maiden, and Lancashire Lad, winner of Perth Plate, are long overdue to appear in public.

Mr. S. C. Liang, who has won innumerable races up in Peking, Tientsin and Tsingtau will make his debut to-morrow and I understand that his best mount of the meeting will be King's Jubilee in the High West Handicap for "B" class China Ponies.

MORE ENGLISH FOOTBALL

Clearing Up A Few Outstanding Games

Several more "clearing up" football matches in the English League were played to-day prior to the season's concluding programme on Saturday.

In the second division Norwich beat Bradford 4-1 and Hull did well to snatch a point from Sheffield United, the teams sharing four goals. In the northern section of the third division Carlisle playing at home drew two all with Barrow.

A friendly match played in London between Clapton Orient and Metherwell saw the Orient win by a goal to nothing.—Rutter.

THE BEST STAYER WILL WIN.

FIRST LEG OF DOUBLE

CYCLAMEN BAY FANCIED

The first leg of the Daily Double is on the High West Handicap for "B" class China Ponies over 1 1/4 miles and the problem is to find the best stayer. Major Shannon's Cyclamen Bay can no doubt last the distance and is assessed at 8 lbs. over the weight for inches, while Sadko is given a penalty of 7 lbs. The first time these two met was in the Morrison Hill "B" class and being a sprint event, both finished unplaced. In the Hongkong Day Handicap over a course from the two mile post, once round and in, contested on March 28, Sadko, the winner, had a pull of 3 lbs. against Mistake Bay, who was second, but to-morrow the position is reversed and under the circumstances there should be a good tussle between Cyclamen Bay, Sadko and Mistake Bay.

Pontiac Bay is nicely in with only 14 lbs. to shoulder and is dangerous with a novice on account of the 6 lbs. allowance. The stable "Lan" has three nominations in Bright View, Jungle Jim and Soldier of China, and anyone from this outfit can do the trick. I hear that Bear Claw put up a good gallop on Tuesday morning and is dangerous to upset the applicant.

A GOOD FIELD

For The Sixth Race

There will be a good field in the second section of Mount Davis Handicap for "C" class China Ponies and the inclusion of Glorious View, Tyne and Waveridge in this class will make the race more interesting. Victoria Hall, who won the Kellett Handicap (Second Section) has been well looked after by the official gentleman, and Flybynight, who was nosed out by High Honour in the same race for second position in the frame, got no allowance for a beating. Valorous, Donovan and King's Sceptre have been well treated and I certainly like Donovan's chance with Tyne and Flybynight following in the rear.

BOXING EVE IS RED HOT

It is to be regretted that the conditions (Ponies that have won $450. or less in stakes since 1st January 1936, barred) of the finale, the Mount Gough Handicap "B" class, have precluded several of the best runners, more so, that the race is to be ridden by novice jockeys. There are only eight entries and should all accept, there will be at least over half-a-dozen novices lining up along the rails with racing fans to do the shouting.

Boxing Eve should start a red hot favourite and Gold Sovereign and Seventeenth of September should follow. Mr. Harris is going to pilot either Boxing Eve or Philanderer, and Mr. H. Botelho, who rode a clever race to victory on Gold Sovereign, will have the same mount. Mr. W. H. Choy is going to meet Seventeenth of September but his brother, Mr. W. C. Choy, has no mount.

Big Start Expected In Opening Race

HALCYON TO BE WATCHED

The first sacking ball will be rung at 1.30 p.m., and I expect all the entries will weigh out for the opening event, Charters Towers Handicap for "B" class Australian ponies over a mile. Night Star, Rose-Ann, Snowy River and The Dunlin, who were recently demoted from the "A" standard, are top-weight carriers and their chief rival will be Ranger, who has been kindly treated.

Halcyon, who has been knocking the door since February last, will be racing under the silk of Mr. Dunbar instead of Lady Southorn's colours, and it is hoped that the change of ownership will bring better luck. There is no denying that Halcyon does not like the night of the barrier, but although he was badly left, Mr. Black managed to steer him to a third place in the Coolgardie Handicap over a sprint of five furlongs run on Easter Monday. To-morrow the distance is a mile and for a long shot, he is certainly worth $5. each way.

Ranger got a thrashing from The Dunlin in the Blue Mountain Plate, but it seemed that the latter's form was a flash in the pan and Ranger is now a different pony. Centre Court, the daughter of Double Court, has not as yet proved to be a worthy sister of Dorby Day, who won the New Bridge Handicap at the Easter meeting without much trouble, but she has only 140 lbs. to carry to-morrow. Of the top-weighters, Rose-Ann is a moody lady and Snowy River can be relied upon to give a good account of herself. Night Star started her racing career here in 1933 and her recent outings among the "Also Rans" were very disappointing to her admirers. Will she stage a come back?

HARVEST VIEW SHOULD WIN

BUT GREAT HALL IS RIVAL

By virtue of winning the Jockey Club Cup at Macao last Sunday, Great Hall has incurred a penalty of 7 lbs. and as the pony will be taken out by the second whip Mr. H. Botelho who will no doubt claim 5 lbs. jockey allowance, Great Hall will have to carry 2 lbs. in addition to the weight allotted, namely 150 lbs. in the Mount Davis (First Section) for "C" class China Ponies over a mile. If this Dun pony can reproduce the Macao form, he should be well up at the finish and likewise his stable companion High Speed.

Harvest View, who has a sequence of six unplaced outings in better fields, has been given the post of honour with 168 lbs. and he should have no trouble to make his acquaintance with the judges. Mr. P. "Pinkie" Botelho has been booked to pilot his old friend Ribble and it will be recalled that this combination gave the St. Andrew's Cup to the owner Mr. Grayburn last November. With Mr. Botelho at the wheel, Ribble will surely be one of the favourites. Booblat Bay, who was second in the Kellett Handicap, has not much of a load to carry, and Dawn Star is well in with only 160 lbs. These two ponies are dangerous.

To-day's Training Times

Nominees for to-morrow's race meeting were out in full force at Happy Valley this morning and did the usual training runs. Tabulated times returned for each quarter will appear on the next page.

OUGHT TO BE A DEAD HEAT

If Form Is Good

An easy win of three lengths has cost Herod a penalty of 17 lbs. in the main event, the Mount Parker Handicap for "A" class China Ponies over the champion course and both Honeycomb Eve and Royal Scot are set to carry weight for inches. King's Warden has been asked to concede 3 lbs. to Herod and if we were to take into consideration the form displayed by these two ponies in the New Stables Plate run on the first day of the Annual Meeting, there should be a dead-heat.

We should see a good race and it cannot be argued that the new camera Honeycomb Eve and Royal Scot have no say in the main event. It must be admitted that Honeycomb Eve's performance in the Morrison Hill "B" class handicap was an eye opener to all and the manner in which she finished the race was impressive. It is learned that Cosack's Beauty, Diana Bay and Soldier of Britain are well tuned for the big race and it is not easy to spot the winner.

I like Ocean View's chance for the "Hunchback" Plate over five furlongs for non-winning Sub-Griffins of this season, but, have no hesitation in saying that the jockey is somewhat slow at the gate, and Cassius and Stop-watch should fill the minor places. Being a sprint race, the start means a lot and I understand that Mr. Proulx, who is rated as the best flier, is going to steer Cassius.

TWENTY-TWO ENTRIES

FOR TAIMOSHAN HANDICAP

There are no less than 22 entries for the Tai-Mo-Shan Handicap "D" class over six furlongs and this, incidentally, is the second leg of the daily double. A good field is assured and it will be the best event of the Meeting.

It is not possible in any way to select several ponies line of conduct as several ponies have been barred and furthermore the problem is somewhat complicated owing to the presence of three old timers brought from a higher standard. Gold Coin, Pride of Tsingtau and Racing Bay, all demoted last week, are to tip the scale at 168 lbs. and Laughing Buddha, a griffin of this year, is in the same boat. Estover, who annexed the Arena Prata Handicap (First Section) at Macao last Sunday, has incurred a penalty of 7 lbs. and he will have to shoulder 168 lbs. We have five ponies at the top of the ladder this being rather unusual.

It may not be known that Pride of Tsingtau, who made the trip to the Portuguese Colony last week did not race the start owing to an injury but he is O.K. now. Linelight and Tillcum are making their first appearance of this season and I believe (Continued on Page 8.)

Little Chilean Player Beats Miss Scriven

Charming study taken recently of Senorita Anita Lizana, the Chilean champion, who yesterday reached the semi-final of the British Hardcourt Championship by beating Miss Scriven.

BETTY'S BIG EFFORT

PERRY V. AUSTIN FINAL AGAIN

London, Apr. 30. Fred Perry has given very good evidence of his physical recovery this last week, the culminating test being reached to-day when he entered the final of the British Hardcourt Championships at Bournemouth after defeating A. C. Stedman, the New Zealander in three straight sets.

Perry, playing well within himself, won very comfortably 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. H. W. Austin, who qualified once again to meet Perry in this championship final, dropped a set to H. G. N. Lee. It was a hard fought second set of twelve games, but Austin won the other three with the loss of but four games. The scores were 6-1, 6-7, 6-1.

There were plenty of upsets in the ladies' championship to-day. Biggest was straight sets defeat of Miss Dorothy Round by Mrs. R. R. King, the ex-Wimbledon title holder winning but six games all told. Mrs. King took the first set at 6-4 and the second at 6-2.

CHILEAN CHAMPION SHINES

Miss Peggy Scriven, regarded by many critics as being England's foremost player at the present time, was brilliantly defeated by the diminutive Senorita Anita Lizana, the Chilean champion. The Senorita, who last year won the important English tennis titles, won the first set at 7-5 and conceded the second at 6-2. But she came back strongly in the final round to win it at 6-3.

Miss Betty Nuthall, striving to make a successful "come-back" this summer, put up a brave showing against the meticulous Mme. Henrotin of France. The French player easily captured the opening set at 6-2 but had to concede the second by the same score. A thrilling contest took place for the final set before Mme. Henrotin won at 7-5.

Miss Kathleen Stammers enjoyed an easy success against Miss Susan Noel, taking the first set at 6-2, and the second at 6-3.

The draw for the semi-finals is: Miss K. Stammers (G.B.) v. Mme. Henrotin (France); Senorita Anita Lizana (Chile) v. Mrs. R. R. King (G.B.).—Rutter.

Pacific—Fred Perry has won the British Hardcourt championship for four successive years. A thrilling contest was fought between "Dunny" Austin in a five set final 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, 6-8, 6-1. In 1934 he beat Jack Crawford in the final 6-4, 7-5, 6-1. Miss Kay Stammers has an opportunity of joining Miss Egan, Miss Mathew and Miss Dorothy Round as the only players to have won the ladies title in two successive years. Last year Miss Stammers won the championship since the first time beating Miss Peggy Scriven in the final 6-2, 6-2.

SHANGHAI WAS NOT IMPRESSED

By China's Olympic Footballers

China Olympic XI 6; Portuguese XI 1.

Olympic XI: K. P. Fan, T. S. Lee, P. K. Tam, W. C. Leung, M. S. Wong, Darcy Chen, S. Y. Young, S. K. Chiew, K. C. Fung, Lee Wai-long, P. W. Ip.

Portuguese: M. Souza, C. F. Henriques, C. Goulao, A. Vidal, A. S. Costa, E. Vidal, R. Favacho, J. Rosario, H. G. Colacao, L. Rosario, V. Souza.

Breaking all ground regulations and tearing down fences in their eagerness to see their favourites give their first exhibition in this city, a capacity crowd of 17,000 or thereabouts, witnessed the Chinese Olympic squad overwhelm the Portuguese by six goals to one at the Yunging Road Stadium, writes "Dee Zed" in the Shanghai Times.

While showing undoubted superiority over their opponents and displaying occasional flashes of combination and attack which will require much to destroy, the Chinese stars played a fairly indifferent game on the whole, and the Portuguese might have reduced arrears considerably had they shown better finishing ability. In fact play in the first half was no criterion of the final result as the Portuguese pressed dangerously on a good number of occasions and conceded little territorial advantage to their opponents.

RETURN TO FORM

It was only early in the second half and towards the end of the first that the Chinese could gain undisputed control of the game, and although the plucky Portuguese defence gave them plenty to think about for the remainder of the match, the Olympic forwards settled down to give a worthy account of themselves and to convince the spectators that their prowess with the ball has not been over-rated.

Fung King-cheung, a Hongkong player of exceptional ability, undoubtedly contributed greatly to the Chinese victory, not only leading the attack well from his position as centre-forward but scoring four fine goals himself. Fung was supported by two fast and clever wingers, Yeung Shu-yek and Ip Pak-wa, while Lee Wai-long delighted the crowd with occasional flashes of his former prowess.

Yeung showed particular brilliancy on the right flank, continuously outpacing the opposition and providing the inside forwards with a variety of centres from which to score. Apart from which to score. Apart

NEW ZEALAND AND FORWARD PLAY

Oliver and Tindill On Formations

That the standard of Rugby in Great Britain had improved to a marked extent is given as one of the reasons for the All Blacks' comparative lack of success during their British tour in a book which has just been written by two of the team, C. J. Oliver and E. W. Tindill, states a letter message from Wellington.

Other reasons given by Tindill were the lack of real scrummaging ability under New Zealand's new formation, injuries to players in key positions and the meeting of combined counties instead of single counties.

Speaking of the All Blacks' forward play, Oliver says that they spent hours on end correcting the faults which were found to exist in the New Zealand scrum methods of to-day. The All Blacks were opposed by a 3-2-3 scrum on most occasions. It is true, he says, that the New Zealand 3-4-1 scrum turned out a success, but that was not till the latter part of the tour, after the scrummers had learnt to pack low in from "O" of the two formations. Consider the 3-2-3 to be the better," he says.

R. Abbit's Article Next Tuesday

R. Abbit's article does not appear to-day as he is still collecting material for a review of the season's cricket. He is pleased to acknowledge receipt of information and statistics from the Royal Navy and Army, and is hoping that other clubs will send him in details of the season's performances, including batting and bowling averages during the next few days.

R. Abbit will start his review of the season just finished on Thursday next. His article will appear in both editions of the Telegraph.

POPULAR SPORTSMAN WILL WED TO-DAY

Sidney Strange, one of the Colony's foremost sportsmen, notably in the football world, is being wedded this afternoon to Miss Eileen Eardley of Shanghai.

The ceremony will take place at St. Joseph's Church at 4.30. One of the best left backs the Colony has ever had, Mr. Strange has played in several international matches, and was also captain of an inter-colonial team in Shanghai. He has figured in many representative matches and has obtained most of the honours possible in local football. He still performs regularly for the Hongkong Football Club.

LISTER HARTLEY'S TWO VICTORIES

Defeats His Brother's Conqueror

Deal, Apr. 30. In the fourth round of the English Amateur Golf Championship here to-day, H. G. Harrison of Middlesex defeated Rex Hartley at the 19th, while Lister Hartley beat L. G. Crawley 6 and 4.

Lister Hartley also triumphed in the fifth round when he beat Harrison 3 and 2 to be joint winner, Cyril Tolley and Langley in the last eight.—Rutter.

With winter over, English sportsmen have resumed their training which this season is more intensive than usual in view of the coming Olympic Games. The picture shows a team of Oxford students getting off the mark.

RIFLE MEETING

Ulster Rifles Doing Well

The first day of the annual meeting of the Hongkong Rifle Association, at the ranges in Kowloon City, was somewhat marred by yesterday morning's heavy rain, which prevented any shooting. However, conditions improved by the afternoon and three of the scheduled Services' Competition events were shot off.

In the Team Revolver Match, the Royal Ulster Rifles carried off first prize with 264 out of a possible 300 points, which was considered to be exceptionally good shooting. The East Lancashire Regiment took second place with 222 points. The teams were as follows:

Royal Ulster Rifles—Lieut. F. G. Ratcliffe, Lieut. C. A. H. B. Blake, C. Q. M. S. Wallace, Sgt. Boyle, Rfn. Boston and Rfn. Ryan.

East Lancashire Rgt.—Lieut. C. Jones, R.S.M. Slater, Cpl. Edwards, L/Cpl. Whitehead, Pte. Hemmings and Pte. Parker.

There were two unscheduled events—shooting at decimal targets at ranges of 300 and 500 yards. Lieut.

AMERICAN BOXING

Barney Duran Beats Gen Padilla

Stockton, Apr. 30. Barney Duran of Stockton gained the decision against Gen Padilla in a six round contest.—United Press.

Ratcliffe won first with a score of 35, and C.S.M. Elvin, of the East Lancashire, won the other with a similar score.

Only part of the Company Match was shot off owing to lack of time. So far seven teams have fired, and the Ulster Rifles (team No. 1), are leading with a score of 331 out of a possible 600. Each team, consisting of eight men, had three ranges to shoot: 600 yards, deliberate fire; 500 yards, rapid fire with movement; and snaphooting at 300.

To-day's programme includes the continuation of the Company Match, and the Light Automatic Match, the Platoon Match (postponed from yesterday), and the Filling Plate Competition (up to semi-finals). There are 22 teams entered for the latter, and they will be eliminated by the "knockout" system. The usual unscheduled events will also be held.

TO-MORROW'S RACE MEETING

their chances are very remote. There is a strong feeling among the "rail birds" that the first three ponies will be the light weighters and the list is not a short one to select from. Of the lot, Belmont Star, Double Chance, Emergency Call, Foxbridge, Old Star, Plain View, Sylvan and West Parade are at the bottom of the assessment and personally I fancy Belmont Star, Plain View and Sylvan.

THE PENULTIMATE EVENT

Australian Ponies In Action

The penultimate event for "A" class Australian Ponies over 14 miles should witness a good race between A Grand Time, Australian Boy, Electron, Lancashire Lad and Shooting Star. We have the form of A Grand Time and Electron at the Easter Meeting, but Lancashire Lad, after being placed third in the Roly-Hill Derby on February 25, has not appeared in public and there is every possibility of seeing him to-morrow under Mr. Black.

At the time of writing there is plenty of water coming down from above and should we have a wet going, Lancashire Lad is dangerous. It will undoubtedly be of interest to recall that he had the satisfaction to trounce Electron, A Grand Time and Ranger in the Perth Plate over a mile at the Annual Carnival. Double Finesse, who was sired by Double Chance, was in the same race with her half sister Derby Day when the latter won the New Bridge Handicap "A" class and that was Double Finesse's first appearance. It will be remembered that she went lame during the training for the big Meeting and although I do not fully expect her to do anything to-morrow, Double Finesse is worth watching for the next contest.

NANKING MATCH

Olympic Soccer Teams Draw Large Crowd

Nanking, April 30. The largest crowd ever witnessed at a soccer match here turned out this afternoon to watch the Olympic teams.

Though mixed teams participated, the team with recognised second stringers surprised the crowd by defeating the team led by Lee Wai-long by three goals to two.

Prior to the match, Mr. Lu Chao, representing Mr. Lin Sen, President of the Executive Yuan, urged the soccer players while abroad to behave and play in a manner displaying the best of Chinese civilization.—Reuter.

BETTER WEATHER?

The anticyclone is moving eastward and pressure is now highest in the vicinity of Shanghai. Local forecast:—East and S.E. winds, moderate; cloudy with drizzle or mist, probably improving later.

LAST OF THE PAGANS

Adapted by CHARLES REED JONES from
the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture

Lilleo, a Tofan maiden, is in love with Mala, a Tofan warrior. Tara, chief of the Tofans, determines to get Lilleo for himself. Mala and Lilleo are among the Tofans who visit Captain Buckley's schooner, which has dropped anchor in the lagoon. After a drunken revel, the Tofans return to the island. But, Mala and five other warriors, tricked by Buckley and Tara, are held on the ship. Mala fights to escape, but he is overcome and locked in the hold. Returning to the island, Tara forces Lilleo to marry him. Mala and the other captives are taken to Patua and forced to work in the phosphate quarries. When a coral tunnel collapses, Mala saves the life of Commandant Brannon, but Mala is pinned under a falling rock.

CHAPTER X

At the first crash of the collapsing tunnel, Reilly and Hastings mustered their men and drove them to the task of rescue. Kivi, fleet Tofan, was dispatched for the doctor. The others wielded their picks and shovels with a frenzy to clear a path to the entombed men. Creeping and squirming his way along, Hastings wormed his way to a great, gnarled hole in the pink coral. He called frantically to his Commandant within the choking, dust-laden cave. There was no answer.

Hastings worked his way back precariously to more solid ground. Pleading, cursing, praying, he exhorted the panting, sweating men to greater efforts. The doctor paced back and forth with nervous steps; two men lay, perhaps dead, perhaps dying, in this ghastly tomb at his side, yet he could do nothing for them.

When, at length, they cut a passage through the debris, Dr. Frawley led the way to the trapped men. Hastings and Reilly following close behind him.

"They're alive!" Frawley shouted after a hasty examination. "Quick! Get them out of here!"

Willing hands carried the men to the safe piles of mats that Frawley had prepared for them. Deftly, he worked over them. Presently, Brannon opened his eyes and looked about in a daze.

"He'll be all right now," Frawley announced. "A few bruises—that's all."

He turned his attention to Mala. He shook his head gravely.

"Bad!" he muttered to himself. "Here, Reilly! We'd better get him back to the office."

But, Dr. Frawley's first fears of internal injuries proved groundless. Bruised and battered by the crushing weight of the coral, Mala recovered quickly under the physician's expert care. His pain eased after a day of intense agony, he rested comfortably on the soft kapok mattresses, prepared for him in the doctor's office.

Commandant Brannon visited him on the second day.

"Helo, Mala! How do you feel?" he asked solicitously.

"Fine!" Mala lied. He smiled happily, pleased at the kindly interest of the white chief.

"A good man, Frawley," Brannon told the doctor. "He saved my life."

"Then, why the shackles?" Frawley asked. "His legs were chained together when we carried him here."

"He was hard to handle on the ship," tried to light his way back to his woman.

The doctor nodded knowingly. "I understand the same old story. Remarkable when you come to think of it—romance flourishing in this God-forsaken hell-hole."

"Well, I owe him something for my life," Brannon replied. "He'll have his woman. I guess you'd better tell him, Doctor; I'm afraid it wouldn't do for me to get sentimental before a native."

He spun about and strode through the door.

With the news that Lilleo was to join him, Mala looked forward with new hope to his life on Patua. With the permission of the Commandant, he worked late into the night, after his daily job at the quarries was done, to prepare a fare for his woman. And each evening, before he returned to this task of love, he paced eagerly down the dusty road to the office to ask the white chief for some news of Lilleo.

"Patience, Mala!" Brannon would say. "She will soon be here!"

Two weeks later, Captain Buckley and Robbins, his Mate, stood in the centre of an excited group of Tofans and villagers in the Tofan village. Lilleo, and-eyed and dejected, stood disinterestedly at the fringe of the circle. The Mate, fluent in the language of the Tofans, droned out his translation of the message from Commandant Brannon. A joyous scream rose shrilly as he read Lilleo's name. Her arms flaying madly, she tore her way through the villagers to Robbins's side.

"Lilleo!" she cried. "Lilleo! I am Lilleo!"

"Okay, Kid! Let's go!" She sensed his meaning, and she stepped forward eagerly to follow him to the beach. Tara caught her by the arm and pulled her back roughly. Lilleo, frustrated again, screamed and fought frantically, but she was helpless in his strong hands.

"Lilleo is Tara's wahine!" he announced majestically. "Tara is the chief!"

"Now, what?" Buckley asked the Mate.

"He says he's the big-shot around here and we can't get away with his dame."

"So, what?"

"Well, if you take my advice, Captain, you'll lay off. A swell chance we'd have of ever pickin' up any more men for the quarries around here, if we try to cross him now."

"Right, you are, Mate! Tell the chief to forget it—we're his friends. I figured it was a dumb idea in the first place."

Robbins conveyed the message to Tara and placated him with a heavy string of bright green beads. Tara hung them about his neck and strutted proudly before his people. Lilleo, thoroughly beaten in spirit, slunk away towards the chief's fare. Rehu, Mala's mother, stole after the despondent girl. She placed a consoling arm about the wahine's shoulders and whispered words of hope into her ear. Lilleo smiled her thanks and hurried on with lighter steps.

When Buckley's schooner heeled over in the brisk breeze of the late afternoon and ran for the open sea, Lilleo lay hidden in its dark hold.

Robbins discovered her the following morning. Too late to return her to the island, he planned to hold her until their next trip. Buckley accepted the wisdom of this course, and Lilleo was locked in a small cabin below deck.

Smiling resignation, planning somehow to escape when the ship docked at Patua.

On the morning of the fifth day, the schooner rode into the harbour at Patua. Lilleo watched through the small porthole. Soon, the ship was man fast to the jetty, and Buckley jumped over the side and started down the pier to the shore.

She lost no time now in carrying out the simple plan she had so carefully formulated through the long days and nights at sea. A thin sliver of light shone along the edge of the hatch above her head, and that faint ray of light was her ray of hope now.

She jumped to the cabin's rickety table with lithic grace and pulled herself up to the hatch. Clinging desperately to a beam near it with one hand, she pushed up the hatch with the other. Cautiously, she quirmed her way through to the deck.

Unseen, she made her furtive way to the side of the ship. The jetty

was behind her. She poised a moment on the rail, then dived gracefully into the sea. With sure, swift strokes, she struck out away from the pier. Her course lay parallel to the line of the shore; her goal was a sheltered cove that had been seen as the ship rode into the lagoon.

Lilleo scrambled up the beach and began her eager search for Mala. As she hurried on, always bearing away from the pier and the threat of recapture, she spied a woman, busily weaving tapa cloth, before a fare. The wahine darted forward to greet her.

"I search for Mala, my love," Lilleo explained. "Does the woman know where the man called Mala can be found?"

"Mala will be there," she said, and she pointed gravely up the long, white, dusty road.

"Mara, thank you!" Lilleo cried gratefully, and she sped up the road.

When Lilleo reached the quarry, the workmen, amazed at seeing a woman in their midst, dropped their tools and stared at her. Reilly, the overseer, ever alert to the stern discipline of Patua, reached for the whistle, dangling from his neck, to recall the men to their tasks, but, as he regarded Lilleo, it suddenly dawned upon him that she was Mala's woman.

"Mala!" he shouted. "Look! Here, come here!"

Mala turned to answer the summons, and his eyes fell upon Lilleo. With a great shout of joy, he dropped his pick and ran to her.

"Lilleo!" he cried. "Lilleo!"

Mala and Lilleo rushed to each other. As they met, he gathered her in his arms with one sweeping gesture. Lost in their ecstatic embrace, they clung together, unmindful of the men around them, deaf to their good-natured roars of laughter.

Reilly, too, was amused, and he was happy for Mala. Half-heartedly and amiably, he turned to the men with his inevitable cry, "Work! Work!"

He walked over to Mala and Lilleo and patted the happy boy on the shoulder.

"You can go home now, Mala," he told him.

Mala needed no further urging. He swung Lilleo into his arms and raced down the road towards his newly finished fare.

FEDERAL CREDIT AT STAKE

PLEA FOR TAX BILL

ENLARGEMENT ESSENTIAL

Washington, April 30. Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee on the new Tax Bill, said it was short of providing the revenue asked by the President in its present form.

"Therefore, he said, it was urgent that reconsideration be given to the Administration's proposals for temporary processing taxes. He added that federal credit depended upon the scrupulous adherence to an orderly programme towards a balanced budget and, later, a steady reduction of public debt.

Questioned as to the probable deficit in the next two years, Mr. Morgenthau stated the deficit in the current fiscal year, which includes the entire bonus payment, was now $5,960,000,000 and that in the next fiscal year it would be $2,675,000,000.

ATTACK GOVERNMENT

Washington, April 30. At its concluding session, the annual convention of the United States Chambers of Commerce approved a resolution condemning the Administration's tax programme, as retarding recovery and re-employment.

The resolution also attacked Federal control of private production as indefensible and against the public interest.

Other resolutions attacked Government competition with private business, and also the attempt to change the Supreme Court and trade agreements facilitating excessive farm imports.

The Chamber approved a survey of the possibility of re-employment by private enterprises, but sharply condemned the Government attempt, by legislative means or executive fiat, to impose upon business rules of conduct in labour relations, as retarding both the material and spiritual progress of the nation.—Reuter.

AZANA WILL BE PRESIDENT

PROCLAIMED BY HIS LEFT WING GROUP

Madrid, April 30. The Premier, Senor Azana, has been proclaimed by the Left wing Republicans as sole candidate for the Presidency, and as the Right parties are not participating, his election is virtually assured.

The Right parties maintain that their constitutional rights have not been restored to them, and that their adherents are being imprisoned and terrorised.—Reuter Special.

NOMANDIE'S MISHAP

LOSES PROPELLOR ON TRIALS

Le Havre, May 1. The trials of the giant French liner Normandie, after three months of refitting, were suddenly interrupted in view of great crowds lining the quayside today.

The vessel was abruptly stopped and a diver was sent down at her stern. He reported that one of her four propellers was missing.

The Normandie has been drydocked and it is hoped the missing 25-ton screw will be found and refitted in time for her first scheduled trip to New York this season, May 6.

STUDENTS OUT ON STRIKE

FURTHER TROUBLE AT SHANGHAI

Shanghai, May 1. Students at Fudan University struck again this morning, demanding that the eight students who were held by the military authorities last month on charges of preaching Communist doctrines but who were later released, shall be allowed to return to school.

The University President, Dr. Li Tcheng-shi, who yesterday afternoon attempted to break up a student meeting by force, was evicted from the auditorium.—Reuter.

PEER'S DEATH

CAUSES BY-ELECTION IN SUSSEX

London, April 30. A by-election in the Lewis Division of Sussex will be necessitated by the succession to the Peerage of Captain Loder, Conservative member, on the death of his father, Lord Waverham, which occurred to-day at the age of 74.—British Wireless.

Huge Naval Expenditure Approved

HOUSE CONSIDERS APPROPRIATIONS

PROVIDE FOR NEW SHIPS

Washington, April 30. The record peace-time Naval Appropriations Bill, designed to make the United States fleet second to none, was approved by the committee of the House of Representatives which has been considering its detail, today.

The estimates total $531,000,000 (£100,000,000) and are devoted to continuing work on eighty-four warships at present under construction and the laying down of twelve new destroyers and six submarines, and increasing the fleet's air arm.

They also include items for building up the reserves of strategic war minerals, and authorise the laying down of two new battleships if other power commences capital ship replacement.—Reuter.

BILL GOES TO HOUSE

Washington, April 30. The House of Representatives today unexpectedly began consideration of the Naval Appropriations Bill, and expects to pass the measure before the week-end.

"A situation has developed," said the Naval Appropriations Committee chairman, "which made the early consideration of the bill necessary."

Earlier, the Committee had reported favourably on the huge supply bill, which allows for construction of twelve destroyers, six submarines, two battleships and 333 aeroplanes, and increases the personnel of the navy and marines.—United Press.

EARLY MORNING JOY-RIDE

DAMAGE DONE TO PUBLIC CAR

OTHER TRAFFIC CASES

Henry M. Wong, 23 years, unemployed, residing at 8 Fung Tai Terrace, appeared before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning, charged with having failed to pay car fare of $5, and with having maliciously damaged a mascot, and a pane of glass on public car No. 280 at Village Road at 3.40 a.m. to-day.

Defendant said with regard to the first charge that he kept an account with the driver of the car. He could not remember having damaged the mascot and the glass, as he was drunk. The driver had given him some wine.

Inspector S. Logan said defendant entered the car about 1 a.m. to-day at Village Road and went to the Central district, then to Wanchai and then back to Village Road. The car was altogether engaged for about two hours. When defendant got out, the driver asked him for the fare, but he refused to pay. It was further alleged that an argument ensued, and defendant seized the mascot from the front of the car and threw it at the window, the pane of which was broken. The mascot was also damaged, the legs and tail of the animal being broken. Damage was done to the extent of $55.

Mr. Schofield fixed hearing of the case for to-morrow morning, allowing defendant bail in $75.

OTHER CASES

Private L. Greening, of the 12th. Company Royal Army Service Corps, was fined $20 by Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a summons for driving military van No. 257 at a speed of over 35 miles an hour, in Hennessy Road on April 19.

Traffic Sergeant Freyer said he followed defendant's van along Hennessy Road to Tongchey Road at a speed of about 35 miles an hour. It was on a Sunday morning.

Lt. Reader said defendant arrived in Hongkong in March. He was a second-class Army driver at Home, at Aldershot, and was a very good soldier.

Mr. Schofield remarked that the authorities were particularly careful about speeding in Hongkong, owing to the number of pedestrians on the roads.

Cheong Fung, owner of lorry No. 4135, was fined $15 for allowing the lorry to be driven with inefficient brakes.

Traffic Sub-Inspector Saunders said the summons was taken out as a result of a fatal motor accident in Queen's Road Central on April 17, in which a Sanitary Department lorry was killed. The brakes of the lorry were very bad.

Lo Qik, driver of the lorry, was summoned for the same offence, but failed to appear in Court. The summons was adjourned one week.

George Eno, driver of car T343, summoned for having failed to report an accident at Windy Gap, Shek-O, on April 13, was ordered to pay $25 amends to the P.W.D. for damage caused to a wall.

Inspector Alexander said defendant took too wide a sweep on a hair-pin bend and created into the wall, which was damaged to the extent of $25. The car was also damaged.

Fines totalling $87 were imposed on the conductors of nine China

NARROW VICTORY MARGINS

RED SOX PILE UP HUGE SCORE

TIGERS' BOSS INJURED

New York, April 30. Chicago Cubs turned the tables on Brooklyn Dodgers to-day when Harp's home run gave them the odd tally. They hit eleven times to Brooklyn's seven.

Pittsburgh, in another National League game, hit back at the Philadelphia Phillies and scored six runs to the home team's five. Watkins hit a homer for the Phillies and Brubaker gave the Pirates a helping hand with a drive over the fence.

Boston Braves, at home, beat the Cincinnati Reds, off colour in their last two starts, by scoring three runs on six hits. They held the Reds to one run on five hits.

St. Louis Cardinals humbled New York by three to two, helped by a home run by Alize. Although the Giants had eleven hits, they were scattered and Cardinals' five connections at the plate were of the sort that count.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The New York Americans had no great trouble with Cleveland's Indians, scoring eight times on eleven hits, and four Indian errors, to their opponents' once, on four batters' successes. Vosmik hit a homer for the losers.

Philadelphia Athletics again walloped the St. Louis Browns, in spite of the gallant attempt of the tail-enders, who scored eight runs on eleven hits. The winners had twelve runs out of fourteen hits. The game was marked by errors, the Browns committing three and the Athletics four.

The Boston Red Sox gave Chicago White Sox their worst beating of the season, getting eighteen hits off Whitehead and scoring sixteen runs. The White Sox hit thirteen times, but only scored four.

Mickey Cochrane, Detroit's famous "boss," injured his foot in the game against the Washington Senators. The Tigers were beaten, though Washington deserved no such luck, having been given six errors. Each side hit ten times, but the Senators got eight men home to Tigers' seven.—Reuter.

CONVERSION LOAN IN N.Z.

£4,000,000 REDEEMABLE IN 1952-55

London, April 30. A New Zealand conversion loan, being under-written to-day, totals £4,000,000. It carries three per cent. interest, the issue price is 98½, and it is redeemable in 1952-55. Provision is made for repayment of six per cent. 1930-51 stock. The first interest payment, of twenty-five shillings, will be made on January 1, 1937.

The subscription list opens on Monday.—Reuter Special.

GIFT FOR HITLER

FROM CHINA EX-PREMIER

Berlin, April 30. The Chancellor, Herr Adolf Hitler, to-day received Mr. Tang Leang Li, Press Chief of the Chinese Government, who presented on behalf of Mr. Wang Ching-wei, former Premier, a valuable Chinese painting and the ex-Premier's autograph.

The health of Mr. Wang Ching-wei, who is staying at Bad Nauheim, is reported to be improving.—Reuter.

Motor Bus Company buses, summoned for overcrowding.

DANGEROUS DRIVING

Summoned before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, at the instance of Mr. R. D. Gillespie, managing director of the Imperial Chemical Industries (China) Ltd., Wong Hung, driver of lorry No. 3640, was fined $30, or one month's hard labour, for driving without due care and caution in Stubbs Road at about 8.45 a.m. on April 2.

Mr. Gillespie, in evidence, stated that he was being driven in his car, No. 3085, towards Hongkong.

Rounding the bend in Stubbs Road the right wheels of the lorry were well over the white lines on their side. His chauffeur was forced to drive the car on to the kerb to avoid a collision, and was forced to stop.

The lorry being driven towards them, the right wheels of the car did lorry just shaved by the car and did not stop. There were no pedestrians on the kerb. The speed of the lorry must have been about 30 miles an hour.

Z. Khan, chauffeur of Mr. Gillespie's car, then gave corroborative evidence.

Defendant denied any knowledge of the incident, saying that on that morning he was taking a load to The Peak.

Mr. Schofield warned defendant that he would recommend his licence to be cancelled if he did a similar thing again.
